PREFACE.

Nothing can be so discouraging to the student of a living language in this country, as the chance of being, by future proficiency therein, when he reaches india, under the disagreeable necessity of unlearning whatever pronunciation or lessons he may have acquired at the outset of his oriental career. Few of my readers, who are in the smallest degree acquainted with british indian affairs, need now be apprized, that they will be exposed to the irksome situation I have just stated, provided they still prefer to this little volume the very inaccurate and inadequate performances of all my predecessors, as their guides to the hindoostanee tongue. To them without one solitary exception we may apply the following lines with great propriety :

Qui sibi semitam non sapiunt, alteri monstrant viam.*

That it is as easy to learn at first the polished and grammatical style of any speech, as it can be to acquire its corrupt and barbarous idiom, is a fact which will stand the test of every person's experience through all quarters of the globe, and in none more satisfactorily than among the various nations of hindoostan. It is true, that such a jargon as the intelligent writer, quoted in page viith mentions, may be acquired very imperceptibly, though in reality the trouble is not less in doing this, than the small portion of manly exertion which is requisite, when properly directed, to attain so useful an object at once as the hindoostanee language.

To obviate as soon as possible, to the utmost of my ability, so serious and galling a loss of time to my countrymen on their way to india, as they would sustain by the perusal of any inadequate and perplexing publications on the civil and military vehicle of discourse in that vast empire, I have been once more induced to devote my leisure hours to their service. Having the fullest conviction, that no future stage of their progress will afford them cause to upbraid me with the charge here preferred against other authors, for that ignorance and incapacity which are still so evident in all the successive attempts at a grammar of the grand popular speech of hindoostan, which have not been servilely copied from my own works, I can surely feel no hesitation to express my sentiments accordingly.

The experience of my friends, as well as my own observations, hath fully convinced me, that in a climate like india, we cannot at starting sufficiently shorten and smooth the road to the colloquial acquisition of its most useful tongue ; I have therefore submitted this abstract to the suffrages of an indulgent public, but with no intention of entering the lists as an author against unworthy competitors, whatever I may yet be induced to do with more creditable opponents. That there are many very respectable individuals, whose stay is too transitory, or whose duties are too laborious and important in india, to admit of other than desultory study, is a truth which every one must allow, as well as the necessity for such persons still possessing a certain knowledge of the hindoostanee or current tongue. For people in either of those predicaments I may safely recommend these sheets, as, though under a simpler form, they rather confirm than deviate from the grammatical rules observed in my larger works, which many persons cannot always afford to purchase, even when procurable at a moderate price. This advice is offered in the conviction, that the present introduction is on the whole much easier and plainer than any thing yet published on the colloquial speech of india. To superficial students, whose ears cannot accurately discriminate sounds, a reversed vocabulary would rather prove embarrassing at first than useful ; it has therefore been omitted, because when ability, leisure, duty, interest, or inclination stimulate any learner's exertions farther than this preliminary step, he will not hesitate to furnish his library with my other publications, and apply to them with the best effect accordingly. To insert the oriental letters in a scheme like this, would at once defeat the very object of so small a performance, and render it nearly as discouraging, from the intricacy of its character, as a complete hindoostanee grammar has hitherto been deemed tremendous by its bulk alone. In the multitude of counsellors there may be safety, when these are duly qualified to offer the advice required ; every stranger, therefore, will do well before he follows any, relative to his own application to the languages, to ask his advisers to translate the following easy sentence in the hindoostanee or popular language. “ Hindee zuban murboot toom seek,ho to seek,ho, pur muen ne aj tuluk yoon hee seek,hee hy.”(1)

(1) This literally translated is—“ indian tongue grammatical, you may learn, then learn, but I now till, thus indeed learned have.” Of which the idiomatical version

If this be readily complied with, by furnishing a translation and analysis, verbally or in writing, the student ought implicitly to follow the plan his friends may lay down for the future prosecution of his studies, otherwise he should hesitate, and advert to the fate of the ~~blind~~ leading the blind in any pursuit whatever. At all events, good reader! my solicitude at the very commencement of your literary labours is so far pardonable, as I honestly wish you should trust neque cæcum ducem, neque amentem consultorem, in all important matters of this kind.

Were the learner to task his self every day with one page of the vocabulary, he would soon be master of the whole by heart, and by acquiring only those words first which occur next to the english, he would very quickly lay in a stock of the utmost consequence to a beginner. When these objects have been attained, the marginal spaces may be appropriated solely to increase the original store, or to a reversed scheme of the whole, including such remarks and observations, as the learner's progress may enable him occasionally to make on the subject of his studies. As he proceeds, his labour will be smoothed by the pleasing conviction, that almost every word acquired from these sheets may be brought to the profit side of his account at once, without the smallest apprehension of being constrained by experience to insert many items to the score of loss, as he must inevitably do with the most of his acquisitions from Hadley, and other catch-penny productions of that stamp.

On the theme of this small work, I feel particular satisfaction in subjoining the following extract from the learned and ingenious philological lucubrations of Mr. H. T. Colebrooke, in the 7th volume of the Asiatic Researches, page 223. “ On the subject of the modern dialect of upper india, I with pleasure refer to the works of Mr. Gilchrist, whose labours have now made it easy to acquire the knowledge of an elegant language, which is used in every part of Hindoostan and the Dukhin; which is the common vehicle of colloquial intercourse among all well-educated natives; and among the illiterate also in many provinces of india; and which is almost every where intelligible to some among the inhabitants of every village.

“ Without passing the limits of Hindoostan, it would be easy to collect a copious list of different dialects, in the various provinces, which are inhabited by the ten principal Hindoo nations. The extensive region, which is nearly defined by the banks of the Suruscuttee and Gunga on the north, and which is strictly limited by the shores of the eastern and western seas ~~to~~ towards the south, contains fifty-seven provinces according to some lists, and eighty-four according to others. Each of these provinces has its peculiar dialect, which appears, however, in most instances, to be a variety only of some one among the ten principal idioms. Thus Hindoostance, which seems to be the lineal descendant of the Kanyukoobju, comprises numerous dialects, from the Oordoo zuban, or language of the royal camp and court, to the barbarous jargon which reciprocal mistakes have introduced among European gentlemen and their native servants. The same tongue, under its more appropriate denomination of Hindce, comprehends many dialects strictly local and provincial. They differ in the proportion of Arabick, Persian, and Sunskrit, either pure or slightly corrupted, which they contain: and some shades of difference may be also found in the pronunciation, and even in the basis of each dialect "

To enable the hindoostanee student to judge and decide for his self as soon as possible, after his arrival in british india, I have here deemed it my duty to insert some judicious and irrefragable arguments formerly published, on the importance and utility of that language.

The language which was long degraded under the name of moors, as a jargon, but at present best known as the hindoostanee, is also frequently denominated hindee, oordoo, and rekhtu. It is compounded of the arabic, persian, and sunskrit, or bhakha, which last appears to have been in former ages the current language of hindoostan.

Owing in some measure to the intercourse of the merchants of arabia with the peninsula of hindoostan, but more particularly to the frequent invasions of it by the moosulmans, and their ultimate conquest of and settlement in it, a considerable number of arabic and persian words became successively engrafted on the original language of the natives, and gradually out of this mixture arose a new language, the hindoostanee, like a modern superstructure on an ancient foundation.

By degrees it assumed its present appearance and estimation ; and the court of diblee, as well as its various metropolitan subordinates, made choice of it, as the sole medium in all affairs depending on colloquial intercourse. Hence its influence in process of time spread abroad so widely, that it became almost universally used in the cities, camps, and courts of the moosulman princes. Many of the native inhabitants also grew familiarised to it, and used it in all their concerns, the validity of which did not depend upon written documents, and even when this was the case, it often became, under the naguree pen, with some slight deviation, peculiar to each province, the more durable vehicle of record, as well as the persian or sunskrit.

As the intercourse and communication of the moosulmans with the natives of india was greater or less, according to certain circumstances and situations, the hindoostance naturally varied considerably, with respect to the prevalence of one or other of the languages composing it. This circumstance will sanction a division of it into at least three distinct dialects; namely, the pristine, or country; the middle, or familiar; and the learned, or court dialect; each of which are respectively useful in different districts, situations, communities and families.

In the first, or pristine dialect, there is a smaller admixture of foreign words; hence this is more nearly related to the original dialects of each province or grand division of the country.

In the second, or familiar dialect, the number of foreign words bears nearly an equal proportion to the original ones. •

In the third, or court dialect, arabic and persian words are by far the most numerous.

It is unnecessary to explain the various moral and physical causes, which have rendered the hindoostance less prevalent in some parts of india than in others, since they must be evident to every reflecting mind. This circumstance, however, by no means invalidates the proposition; for although it may be granted, that particular dialects are spoken by the inhabitants of several districts and provinces of india, yet we may boldly assert, that none of them, taken individually, is so generally useful and necessary as the hindoostance. Nor will the assertion appear too arrogant, when it is considered, that however extensive a country may be, and how numerous soever the dialects spoken in it, still the language of its courts and provincial capitals will always be most generally known and understood, and must of consequence be that most worthy of attention and cultivation by foreigners, wishing to live, move, and have a comfortable being among the inhabitants of any portion of the globe.

We shall now advert to a few arguments, which will doubtless be convincing and satisfactory proofs of the truth of the foregoing propositions.

In the whole of the vast country of hindoostan, scarce any moosulman will be found, who does not understand and speak the hindoostanee, with more or less polish and propriety, according to local and individual circumstances, of birth, education or other contingencies.

Every hindoo also, of any distinction, or who has the least connection either with the moosulman or the british governments, is, according to his situation, acquainted in some degree with this language.

It is moreover the common medium by which the natives in general, and many persons of various foreign nations settled in hindoostan, communicate their wants and ideas orally to each other. Of the truth of this, indeed, we ourselves are an evidence, as are the portugueze, dutch, french, danes, arabs, turks, greeks, armenians, georgians, persians, mooghuls, and chinese, who often converse together in the hindoostanee, as a more convenient lingua franca for india, than their own individual language.

In all the armies of india this appears to be the language universally used; even though many of the individuals composing them, be better acquainted with the dialects peculiar to their respective kingdoms, provinces, and districts, as their mother tongue.

Nearly from cape comorin to kabool, a country about 2000 miles in length, and 1400 in breadth within the ganges, few persons will be found in any large villages or towns, which have ever been conquered or much frequented by mosulmans, who are not sufficiently conversant in the hindoostanee ; and in many places far beyond the ganges, even on the shores of the eastern isles, this language is current and familiar, or so well known that it can be readily understood.

An accurate knowledge of the customs and manners of tribes and nations depends principally on an acquaintance with their colloquial languages ; and in no country, perhaps, is this knowledge more essential, or a more desirable object of attainment, than in hindoostan, the inhabitants of which differ so widely in religion, laws, customs and prejudices, not only from the people of europe, but among their selves all over india.

When the conquerors and rulers of a country are so unacquainted with the current speech of their subjects, that they prefer the language of their former subduers, the natural consequences must evidently be injustice on the one part and great disaffection on the other, independently of various causes of alienation from the galling yoke of any foreign power.

Although, in the popular language of any country, there may be a deficiency of books of science, still that language is the most proper and necessary for conducting colloquially the affairs of civil government and commerce, of military as well as judicial concerns. It may be observed, that many centuries have not elapsed since the learning, laws, and religion of our own country were preserved, communicated, and studied in more than one foreign language; those languages, however, have been fortunately superseded by the english, a sufficient proof that the current language of the country should always be deemed most worthy of public cultivation and private study.

Although the hindoostanee language does not yet boast of very many prose compositions, historical works, or volumes of science, yet how many elegant tales and beautiful poems have been composed in it! How universally are domestic, commercial, and military concerns, and even political correspondence of the highest consequence, connected with it, and even carried on in it! And in this place, let us once for all observe, that the instructions of the learned natives, and all their disputations and arguments on subjects of literature, are conducted in it ; and that in every case, where a native of hindoostan wishes either to compose or to dictate any thing to be translated from his own to another tongue, he constantly arranges his ideas, and explains his meaning, in the hindoostanee, before it be committed to writing as a persian epistle, or political document of any value.

Lastly, a correct and general knowledge of this language greatly facilitates the acquisition of many others, when they become in their turn successively the objects of attainment, from motives of duty, interest, or pleasure, and it is the only means till then, by which we can more effectually prevent injustice and imposition.

If the allegations and arguments which have been made be founded on truth, what now can be brought to invalidate their force? * The conclusion from the premises is therefore this ; that to the merchant, the traveller, the civil and military officer, the lawyer and divine, the philosopher and physician ; in short, to every one who carries on concerns of any moment in india, or who wishes to exist there, in safety and happiness, the hindoostanee language is more generally necessary and advantageous than any other; and on this account, it ought to be the very first object of acquisition, and ever afterwards most cultivated and esteemed for paramount utility over all the rest.

For three months after reaching india, the attendance of a native teacher, or moonshee, upon a scholar, seldom, because premature, produces much benefit; on the contrary, except in the mere pronunciation of a few letters, such interference generally does a great deal of harm, being enough to disgust all beginners from future perseverance as oriental scholars. To those readers who will so far confide in my judgment, as to follow my advice, I shall candidly impart it by desiring them, while on board ship, and in the above period after arrival, to acquire, if possible, the difficult sounds from some of their well-informed european friends; and at the same time to make their selves complete masters of every word, technical term, and rule in this minute volume at least, before they sit regularly down to study the language with any moonshee. Indeed, if they can prevail on their selves to include the story teller, reversed vocabulary, and english and hindoostanee dictionary in this counsel, they never will have cause to repent such precaution, as it may save them much vexation, trouble, antipathy, a great deal of time, and even some cash, on the score of native instructors, of whom not one in a thousand has sufficient ability and sagacity combined to conduct the studies of a new comer, with propriety and effect, in the hindoostanee, or any other oriental tongue. If the assistance, however, of such men be in the beginning unavailing and tormenting, the aid of ignorant menials, who have a smattering of english, is still more pernicious and delusive; every scholar, therefore, who intends ultimately to make his self a proficient in hindoostanee, will find it his interest in many respects to believe, that I expect no adequate advantages, which can instigate me to mislead and deceive him in any pursuit of this kind, when I thus communicate my own undisguised sentiments of these people, on the present occasion, and consequently deprecate all such unseasonable and equivocal aid accordingly. This caveat is inapplicable where the student has previously learned enough of hindoostanee, (which should always be done at home when practicable, or on the outward voyage to any one of the british indian presidencies,) to enable him to converse with tolerable ease upon ordinary subjects, and also in a way to be understood, by an expert native instructor, upon grammatical themes.

• A knowledge of the hindoostanee is not only essential for every stranger in british india, who must have a personal communication with the natives at large, but moreover, paves the way for the speedy acquirement of the persian and other oriental tongues, in that country, where alone they can be generally learned, as local or classic languages, through the medium of the hindoostanee, which is the vernacular speech of the people, and necessarily of all the moon-shees, or native teachers, in hindoostan.

In the armies, maritime, and domestic affairs of india, no other language than the hindoostanee is universally spoken or understood; nor is any other required from the british indian officers on the spot, or the cadets now studying it and tactics at the company's military academy.

As several modern and ancient tongues may be deemed both useful and ornamental to men of liberal education in europe, the persian, sunskrit, arabic, &c. will prove equally so in india; but it should always be recollected, that to every person there, the hindoostanee is no less indispensable, than a knowledge of english evidently is to any stranger residing among, and transacting business with the inhabitants of the united kingdom; and consequently should be treated as the most requisite qualification for gentlemen bound to the east-indies ; because they will sooner or later find, that, comparatively, the learned languages and provincial dialects, such as the bungalee and many other local tongues, are secondary considerations, which may be afterwards acquired in india, with greater facility, less expence, and much more effectually, than they can be, when preposterously, attained in this country.

If the above reasoning be founded in facts, well known and established for some years past both at home and abroad, the public may reasonably hope, that all the oriental departments at home will speedily embrace the hindoostanee as an object of the first consideration to the students destined for india ; since we must admit, that however learned our british judges, civil and military officers, might otherwise be, they would all prove now-a-days wholly unfit for their respective offices in our country, without an adequate knowledge of their mother tongue ; and the hindoostanee being exactly to india, what the english language is colloquially to the united kingdom, or what the turkish is to that empire, the inference is so very plain, that he who runs may read.

To students who wisely commence their oriental career with the grand popular speech of india, which has hitherto been very undeservedly superseded by the persian, while degraded and misrepresented under the absurd term of moorish jargon, or moors, all the works enumerated in the subsequent catalogue will necessarily prove of the highest utility and importance, either at their outset or progress through the most useful, to beginners, of all the eastern tongues, among which however the persian, being still the written medium of political and miscellaneous correspondence, though by no means exclusively so in every quarter of the peninsula, it certainly ranks next in order of study and importance in this country, and may be very advantageously joined with the hiindoostanee, thus forming two congenial objects of oriental pursuit for six or twelve successive months, before embarkation, and on the whole outward voyage also.

Those publications most essential are inserted first, that should circumstances render economy unavoidable, even in such purchases, three, four, or five only may suffice, till the student can in india more conveniently supply his self with the rest, also procurable there, as they become requisite in the course of his more advanced studies, at his own expence, when not less willing, and probably more able, to defray every progressive charge of this sort. When a number of hiundoostanee students proceed to india in one ship, they might, besides their private property of books, lay in a common stock, as a useful library on board, at a very moderate expence, which would in many cases amply compensate for this small additional disbursement to obtain the extra supply in question for every emergency. This third edition of "the stranger's east indian guide" has been so much enlarged and improved, as to constitute almost a new work, with the old popular name retained, under which it first appeared, many years ago, at calcutta, and has since become such a favourite with the public, that a large impression has lately been sold off with uncommon rapidity. Finding the guide a most commodious text book for my hiundoostanee lectures, which have enabled me greatly to enhance its value, without a proportionate encrease of price for its present form, I have been induced to remould the whole plan of some portions of these rudimental sheets, to render them not less useful to my own students, during each course, than they will still prove to ordinary purchasers, who do not attend my class. Those scholars, whose time and other circumstances will admit of acquiring from the first, a critical and comprehensive knowledge of both occidental and oriental sounds and symbols, contrasted with each other, will do well to consult the “ultimatum,” or “hindoostanee story teller” for a full and particular account of my hindee-roman orthoepigraphy; while, on the other hand, persons not having leisure nor conveniency to enter so deeply into the subject at the commencement of their career, should confine their attention to the guide alone, as it will convey a very practical acquaintance with the powers that each letter of the hindee-roman alphabet possesses, merely in that capacity by appropriate illustrations and examples from our own language. To throw some novelty and interest into so dry a theme as the a, b, c of hindoostan, without invalidating the real sound of any one of its alphabetical characters, I have contrived to show each in its etymological colours also; a device that confers, in some measure, “a local habitation and a name” upon letters, otherwise so insignificant, that they would make little or no impression upon most minds en passant, either as the vocal elements of words, or the significant particles, which constitute the etymology of speech, in the grammatical acceptation of this term. The remarks upon every link of the abecedarian series in succession, if properly studied, may insensibly create a relish for pössessing that critical acumen in philological economy, which can be universally applied to the whole of the dead and living languages, ancient or modern, yet known or unknown to us, in short to all dialects that ever did or can exist on the surface of our globe; because the very same or similar rules, with little variation, must always regulate the nature and changes of human speech. Should such a spirit of investigation be produced by barely studying the hindoostanee alphabet diligently, it alone will facilitate the learner's progress through the different divisions of grammar afterwards with a rapidity, ease, and success which will soon astonish his self; but, if this effort demand more thought than the common herd of mankind, either young or old, are found to possess, every thoughtless individual so situated must rest satisfied with the usual routine of rudimental instruction, and proceed directly from the hindoostanee horn-book, without a moment's pause or reflection on the important qualities of its elementary contents, in the ordinary jogtrot of a scholastic pack-horse, through the successive dull courses of nouns, pronouns, adjectives, verbs, and so on, with the memory overloaded, and mental energies not a whit more expanded than these originally were at the starting post. Let any intelligent tyro only persevere in his exertions to learn my literal and etymological alphabet, as he really ought, slowly but surely, and I shall venture to promise him the highest gratification in his subsequent lucubrations as a profound oriental and occidental philologist, besides becoming an accomplished linguist in any language he may ever wish to add to his own.

In this mode of proceeding, the hindoostance parts of speech will all appear organised upon a few leading principles, which are applicable universally ; whence a due knowledge of every verbal inflection, in its broadest sense, will become perfectly familiar, after learning the declension of a single noun, in its masculine and feminine forms. The consonants in their shortest possible formation are called bu, (bă) pu, (pă) mu, (mă), &c. which though modified to bec, pce, mee, or with any other affixed vowels, these would, as proper names, be equally expressive, nay were we to reverse the pa-pa, ma-ma of nature, and term them literatim ub, up, um, or ab, ap, am, eeb, ecp, eem, &c. with the aid of any prefixed vowel, it is evident that the expression of the consouantal symbol is no way invalidated or suspended, whatever may be the result of their naked exhibition respectively as a vowel-less, or in other words, a life less b, p, m; the vowel in fact, wherever placed, or however modulated, being to every consonant exactly what the soul is to the body, this, without that, is useless matter, while a vowel like a spirit can exist, se ipse. And to render the analogy still more complete be it recollected, that vowels are not less tangible and transient in words, than the vital breath of the animal creation is in the nostrils of man, they seem to come and go with the wings of the wind, and thus play at bo-peep with each other, in thousands of instances, in different dialects and countries, where the firmer consonants, sometimes under congenial transmutations, manage nevertheless to keep their ground, often however so slippery, that even they lose their feet, and thus glide through semivowels or semiconsonants, within the spiritual pale of self forming sounds. An early and acute habit of detecting such literal transmigrations is the grand secret of etymological art, which in one point of view has been almost laughed to scorn, by those superficial coxcombs, who conceive that this science having been repeatedly abused by indiscreet etymologists, is a sufficient reason for turning it into ridicule, without recollecting how such conduct cuts, like a saw, both ways, and may thus be turned against every good thing under the sun, because some knaves or fools have occasionally made a bad use of it, when in their hands. The arrangement and concatenation of every literal category in the world, has hitherto been so inconsistent and absurd as to exhibit rather an undigested chaos, at eternal war with its own elements, in the wreck of all principles, than a rational scheme for initiating novices at the very threshold of learning, where, if they do not stumble and fall, “never to rise again,” is owing to blind chance, and the total want of due reflection, not to any good guiding. I am probably the first grammarian who has yet attempted to introduce a complete radical reform in this humble province of literature, and have in the space of thirty years reached that “ne plus ultra,” of my alphabetical labours, lately presented to the british indian community in the hindoostanee story teller ; an abstract of which will now be found in this rudimental work, intended for the most convenient syllabus of future prelections in that extraordinary tongue, to the military, medical, and all other gentlemen of the king’s or company’s service, who may yet be induced to attend my different courses and classes, during every term, at the voice of duty, interest, or conscientious principles, previous to departure for a subjugated land, overflowing with milk and honey, and where the myriads of natives understand, generally speaking, no language but their own. This happens fortunately, except in the article of pronunciation, to be the most simple and regular dialect-extant, and so uniformly easy, in the whole of its etymological organization that a single prospectus, after only studying the alphabet assiduously, will make a scholar of middling talents a perfect grammarian, from laying a firm and broad foundation upon literal and syllabic grounds alone. Having already stated, that the letters b, p, m, may be indifferently brought into play, by any affixed or prefixed vowels whatever, I shall take advantage of this fact so far as to subjoin all the monosyllabic, significant particles, and words, that can properly be enumerated under every character. This mode will furnish progressively bu, ba, bi, be, bee, bo, boo, bue; ub, ab, ueb, pu, pa, pee, pue; up, ap, op; mu, ma, mi, mee, me, moo, muo, muc; um, am, im, eem, &c. for explanation; as prefixes, interfixes, affixes, significant words or particles in any of the three tongues, from which the hindoostanee is evidently composed. The process may at first sight seem tedious and slow, but the succeeding proficiency will, in the very same proportion, be both swift and sure, with nothing of that concomitant ennui which must lower upon every race of an apathetic tortoise, with a heedless hare. At every step through the hindoostanee symbolic sounds, there is a useful sense conveyed in the train of each, and this very seasonably supplies the memory with a strong light, reflected upon it by the unavoidable expansion of an intelligent mind, over the various characters when they pass in regular review before this grand marshal of my abecedarian and etymological divisions and subdivisions, arrayed in congenial order, from the easiest vowels down to the most difficult of the consonants: These are the very gutturals with which the sunskrit, perversely enough, commences that series of letters, though the vowels very properly precede its consonants, while in other systems they are jumbled promiscuously without rhyme or reason, being at all visible through the whole, and the greek even has alpha in the van of its literal phalanx, with omega in the rear, instead of being, as in my scheme, close together.

From a desire to be usefully employed, and various causes of a private description, after a long interval, having resumed my hindoostanee campaign with a fresh stock of experience and philological ammunition, it behoves me henceforth to defend those oriental fields, which were first taken by myself, from all ungenerous poachers and intruders. Some of these interlopers have already fattened on the sweat of my brow, and the produce of my expensive labours in india, without one of them possessing heads capable of making a single discovery in their compilations from my works, though their hearts have been narrow enough to exclude me, as much as possible, from reaping the grapes of a vineyard, which has hitherto been entirely of my own planting and cultivation, with sacrifices and risks almost inconceivable. The only scare-crow against such beasts and birds of prey, that I can at present afford to erect, will appear in the following translation of the 90th number from the story teller. “ A banker “ jogging along with a bag of guineas, which “ a highwayman observing, was allured by the “ booty to follow close at his heels, but had “ not advanced far, when he attempted to lay “ violent hands on the cash. During this, several persons came up, and having hand-cuffed

“ the robber, took him away to the police magistrate’s. Some one observing him, remarked thus: ‘ When thou just passed by “ hence, then indeed thy condition was the reverse of what it is now, in so short a space,

‘what hast thou done to put thee in fetters?’
“He replied, ‘my case is exactly this:

“ A silly fly stuck fast in honey, “ Fatal indeed as love of money “ To sordid fool or knave,
“ With twirling head and wringing paws,
“ In vain denounces greed—the cause,
 “ Of its untimely grave.”

Should this exhibition of one poor fly not deter certain unlicensed sharp-shooters and sportsmen, without any qualification for encroaching upon the fair game of my hindoostanee manor, I may yet feel inclined to pin a brace of those militant blue bottles on the chariot wheels of “the stranger’s east-indian guide,” thus lustily exclaiming, “lord what a dust we kick up in the course of our literary plunder, “we certainly are par nobile fratum, and “ought at least to live in peace with each other, “while both are feasting on the hard earned “philological honey of an old working bee’s collection, whence, in fact, we from the first “imbibed that eastern lore, which, as stolen “goods, is at present shining more conspicuously from our big bellies, than it ever can “from block-heads so ill furnished as our own, “without a constant supply from the spoliation “of that original hive and store which alone

“ have mutually offended against the laws,—of “ gratitude, honour, and common honesty, it “ becomes therefore our best policy to shake “ hands, and be friends.”

“ Hos ego liberculos feci, tulit alter honores.”

A line which I shall use the freedom to turn so:

“ Qui capit ille facit,” and those whom the cap fits are welcome, as the volunteer heralds of such glorious deeds, to proclaim the blushing honours with which they are now invested.

To one and all of them, I shall fearlessly address this valediction, “stant nominum umbræ,” go and sin no more, lest a worse thing befall you in the fourth edition of this little book, where I may be compelled to declare, “ecce homines! in propriis personis.”

OF THE
HINDOOSTANEE TONGUE.

1. utility, simplicity, facility, consistency, and the perspicuity of reason and truth should form the basis of every scientific superstructure, even at the hazard of innovation and radical reform in that republic of letters, called the alphabet, which constitutes the foundation of rational speech and grammar, though in general absurd and preposterous, in the extreme.

2. the plain, broad, full, open, manly, scottish articulation of latin is more applicable and appropriate to hindoostanee orthoepy, than any other, and, with few exceptions, best calculated to produce accurate colloquists in that useful tongue, who from the first can hardly make the long vowels too much so, nor their slender sounds short enough, until extensive practice, and the nature of speech, points out, those medials which have no visible forms.

3. such illusive names as alpha, beta, aitch, you, double you, are inadmissible for a system of orthoepigraphy, where the names and powers of letters should serve like echos to each other, as far as possible, preserving at the same time that rigid uniformity which is completely lost in our absurd jee, jay, eff, ell, the vowel being capriciously both a prefix and affix to the consonant in the generality of literal nomenclatures.

4. a, bu, hu, u, wu, gu, ju, fu, lu, are the concise hindoostanee representatives of the foregoing a, &c., which, in verbal collocation, would at once form in the mouth of a mere child, by the first five letters variously placed wubha, wabhu, bhuwa, bhawu, ubwah, abwuh, bahuwa and many more; in none of which however could our deceitful aitch and yoo, single or double, mislead the learner.

5. a being always the long sound in hall and u its very short power in hull, the last never can become the oo of ooze nor yoo of use, as neither pluralists nor sinecurists have existence in this literal commonwealth, the aspirated hu

consequently can in no situation be mute, and ju, gu, must ever retain their actual sounds, respectively visible in jug, though transmutable enough with each other

6. u is considered the spirit by which the semivowels æu, yu, hu, and all consonants are enabled to live, move, and have a being in those capacities, whence their simple appellations, or the fu, lu, &c. of fun, lull, animated as it were by this short almost inaudible u of up, us, sun, never the misplaced oo of bull, put, v.5.

7. every simple sound has its own peculiar symbol, but compounds of course require the conjunction of two, when no single roman character exists to express each of them, as a tertium quid, that cannot then be confounded with its original constituent parts.

8. on this principle, long vowels oo, ee, and the true diphthongs uo, ue, occur in that way ; also the combinations sh, zh, ch, kh, gh, wherein the common aspirate h has become a mute subservient element, in the formation of sounds, which we cannot otherwise exhibit in the roman alphabets, though the oriental systems possess them as distinct symbols.

9. the whole series of letters, with the slight unavoidable exceptions just explained, may be said to resemble the laws of those ancient nations, which were unalterable, since neither position nor association can change a single or double character of this literal scheme, where uo, ue, even are by analysis only the u, o, e, of up, ope, ere, and synthetically the diphthongal vowels in our, house, guide, guile, buy, orthoepigraphically here rendered uor huos, gued, guel, bue.

10. oriental letters having no capitals, in our acceptance of the term, all their roman substitutes are treated as small working bees, on a footing of perfect equality, in their size, without one notable or grandee for the abecedarian community, in compliance with the first principle; especially as the persi-arabic capitals, when they do appear, adorn rather the tail than the head of a word or sentence, even where the majesty of heaven, as the king of kings, would seem to require a great initial-shahunshah, emperor, and badshah, padshah, king, are literatim and verbatim proofs of the fact in question; the original final being no way more elevated in dignity than the minute shu or humble bee, bu, pee, pu, are initially.

11. a dot . or dash - denotes the original orthography only, the orthoepy being thereby no where affected but in d, r, t, ṛ alone, which are thus rendered harsh, palatial dentals, while the n is attenuated to a mere french nasal, so ṇ.

12. two characters accidentally associating, and in full possession of their pristine powers, might become one or other of the combinations noted under 8, were this not prevented by the intermediate , always prefixed to the aspirated h in order to preserve its prowess unimpaired by any contingency, when the aspiration is not wholly lost or absorbed in a different sound.

13. to obviate all confusion from the chance meeting of o, o, e, e, n, g, n, k, s, h, z, h, k, h, g, h, p, h, t, h, and to keep the aspirates always in view, the common mark of division will be invariably so inserted lest bo,o, k,h_han, t,h_he, p,h_hir, un,g_gula, co,n_nko, uš,h_hab, tu,z_zh_heeck, should be taken for or sounded as boo, khan, the, fir, ungula, conko, ušhab, tuzheck.

14. an alphabet for the hindoo stance, constructed on just principles requires to be divided and subdivided into 13 vowels and semivowels, thus-u. a, o, œ, oo, uo, wu, i, ee, e, ue, yu, hu, simple, and diphthongal, which may all be nasalized so-añ, oñ, &c. 7 labials mu, bu, bhu, pu, phu, fu, vu, 5 lingui-dentals nu, ngu, lu, ru, ru, 8 palati-labial dentals, ðu, ðhu, tu, t̃hu, du, d̃hu, tu, t̃hu, 8 lingui-dental sibilants su, shu, zu, zhu, chu, ch̃hu, ju, j̃hu, and 9 gutturals ku, k̃hu, khu, gu, gh̃u, ghu, qu, in all 13 vowels and 37 consonantal sounds, or 50 separate, simple, and compound characters; besides nasals and the four euphonized, expired, and inspired series wu, wa, wo, woo, &c. yu, ya, yo, yoo, &c. hu, ha, ho, hoo, and uh, ah, oh, ooh, &c. of all which more fully hereafter.

15. the transmutations of letters, though more frequent in their own congenial classes of vowels, labials and the like, nevertheless occasionally pervade every division and subdivision of the catalogue so indiscriminately, that it may often be difficult to distinguish the type and prototype from each other, without considerable knowledge of those practical rules for the natural conversion of abecedarian symbols respectively.

16. every species of hiatus and cacophony seems to be obviated in hindoostanee by the elision of any troublesome short or long vowel, especially when these coalesce inflectively, or by the convenient interfixes wu, yu, lu, ru, nu, hu, tu, du, that are so useful in this etymological department of every tongue.

17. previous to the exhibition of a perfect nomenclature of simple, diphthongal, nasal, and semivowels, with the various categories of consonants in natural succession, either as mere letters or significant moveable particles, the 6 subsequent principles must so far be anticipated,

To render all the literal remarks clearly intelligible to a mere hindoo-stance alphabetist.

18. the articles a, the, being inherent in the words of this tongue, the english meaning will of course appear without them, whence all the parts of speech may be comprised in nouns, verbs and particles, under the form of letters, syllables or words as the radicals, prefixes, interfixes and affixes in particular vocables, of every species and denomination whatever, the due knowledge of which, makes the etymological department, in both senses of that epithet, easy in the extreme.

19. for the indefinite and unmeaning technicals, declension, case, genitive, only the efficient terms class, state, and adjective form, have been adopted to supersede the musical string of dative, accusative, vocative, ablative, and instrumental cases, in their application to english and hindoo-stance, in both of which it is high time, that common sense should supplant all modes of pedantic sounds, when any of them become “vox et preterea nihil” in modern grammars.

20. our prepositions are actually postpositions in hindoo-stance, which being a very appropriate name will be retained accordingly, to confer such logical qualifications on the nouns they govern, as the meaning of for, by, with, after, in,

at, &c. may respectively indicate cause, manner, association, instrument, when translated to the english language, and people, should they yet become more enamoured with the scholastic definitions causal, modal, social, local, vicinal, &c. than I am.

21. as we actually have the postpositions 's, ward, and often reverse the regular order of to, by, in, with, &c. it can excite no surprise when hinduwee, persian and arabic prepositions thus appear in hindoostanee, which, however strange, admits even a pre-post-position occasionally, the noun being then central, only however when the postposition is not simple, but compound.

22. such grammatical distinctions as the above, when perfectly obvious and applicable universally, are all of course carefully preserved, if at the same time consistent with the genius of the hindoostanee tongue, or that philological nomenclature, which might soon be made as perfect as the boasted chemical device of the same kind, were the light of modern reason implicitly followed, in these matters at least, rather than a blind faith in the glaring darkness of ancient lore, and classical superstition.

23. the first state corresponds with what has been called the nominative or subjective case; the second state represents the oblique, accusative or objective, and the adjective form is a synonymous term for the genitive and possessive of most languages.

24. includes the whole hindoo stance alphabet in detail as letters and significant particles, with their appropriate remarks, in conformity to principle 14.

u is invariably the shortest possible sound of a, heard in us, up, see 5, 6. as a prefix it denotes negation, privation, and disjunction, u-chook infallible, u-par shoreless, u-lug disjoined, in u-be sirrah! it seems the vocative prefix ue, o! contracted before the second state of ba, baba, sir, sire. affixed u has various uses, nam name, nam-u book, huft seven, huft-u week, chushu eye, chushu-u fountain, bund bound, bund-u bond man, do-sal-u biennial, chuo-gosh-u four cornered, and is the final of persian past participles, equivalent to our ed, d, t, en, n, in moord-u dead, azmood-u tried, &c. in many instances this final is arbitrary, whence humesh-u always, kumar-u side, kumecu-u mean, with or without the affix, which often assumes t, as iradu-t intention, meenaru-t minaret, isharu-t sign, hint. though a masculine particle, it, in arabic, is the very reverse, şahib master, şahib-u mistress, shair-u poet-ess, hamil porter, hamil-u pregnant, and in that language u is the leading letter of comparatives, many concretes and plurals, u-kbur greater, u-h muq fool, u-khbar news, from khubur, which shows that such words are pluralized by the transposition of one u and the conversion of the other to a, luqub title, ulqab, udub respect, uudab, rendered adab as two shorts make one long sound. in various passive participles, u is the discriminator, mcorukkub compounded, mcorukkib compounder. when u is radical it implies existence, passion, intransitiveness of particular verbs, pul-na to thrive, mur-na to die, kuṭ-na to cut, uṭuk-na to stop, and being a short feeble vowel like i, eo, they all have their energies encreased to form their corresponding active, transitive verbs, by a species of duplication, that naturally creates those examples enumerated under the long a, o, oo, e, ee, q. v. as well as the two very impotent correlatives i, eo, of the last four vowels. u in some instances is lost in their ramifications, burus year, 2d state plural burson years, nikul-na to issue, nikla issued, as per principle 16. when u and a reciprocate there is commonly an equivalent change in the consonant, buttee, batee wick, candle, chuddur, chadur sheet, either a sheet or the sheet according to circumstances, so far explained in 18. in the arabic definite ul the, u seems the most stable letter of the two, the last being frequently absorbed in the initial of the subsequent noun, thus ul shums the sun becomes ush-shums, but on the other hand, u is convertible to ∞ , i, by a process of inflection peculiar to that complicated language, on which we shall not prematurely, and cannot prudently descant, in this humble guide to the hindoostance alone uṇ u followed by the n in its nasal modification with the dot below, by which the common n is so attenuated from the consonantal to the inarticulate vowel sound, that the u assimilates with ṇ almost as one homogeneous vowel: a remark pertinent to all the rest, and illustrated by the fact, that final an of the first state singular is subject to the same change in the second, to which a alone is obnoxious: for the proofs consult a and an respectively, uṇ is found in huṇs-na to laugh, phuṇs-na to stick, and a few more, in which it will insensibly resume the full power of n among such inexperienced nasalists, as the english are, comparatively with the french and hindoostanees, to both of whom, this indigenous twang has peculiar charms.

a constantly to be prolated awc as the synthetic expression of u, u, at least, if not sometimes u, u, u, by analysis, and could we easily discriminate u, u, as the medial and u, u, u, as the longest possible sounds of the scottish ā, without a more minute refinement in these respects than a useful system can admit, this might prove a consummation devoutly to be wished: at all events pan must be pronounced pawn, never pane, nor pan, for this would really be out of the frying pan, into the fire, since no such a, as the last example contains, can belong to the popular speech of hindoostan. a, as a word, means come thou, having come, and perhaps to prevent hiatus or misconception it assumes n in an, instead of a, unless indeed the old verb was really an-na to come or bring. arabic active participials, nouns of agency &c. require a for their second letter qutl murder, qatil murder-er v. i and ee. and some plurals have it as the second last, ushraf nobles, uṣḥab disciples, masters. this energetic a converts intransitive to transitive verbs, pal-na to nourish, mar-na to kill, smite, kaṭ-na to cut, bite, uṭka-na to stop, which last by the elision of its radical will come under the same rule with jula-na to burn, v. a. from jul-na v. n. where the a is an active interfix for the infinitive between its sign na to, and the root, on the principle of addition peculiar to this class of verbs, which thus differ from marna &c. where substitution alone is requisite even in trisyllabic examples, like bigur-na to spoil, v. n. bigar-na v. a. ap self, in the reflective and adjective form changes to up-na own, self. the interfix a somewhat resembles our own, sur-a-pa cap a pie, lub-a-lub brimful, shub-à-shub all night, but must be variously translated by, to, full, all, in rung-a-rung, bur-a-bur, dour-a-dour, duo-a-duo, &c. sur-a-sur from end to end, entirely. the affix a, is an incremental and masculine sign of nouns of the first class, with other properties so multifarious, as to defy their detail, within a reasonable compass, gol round, gol-a ball, mcorgh bird, mcorgh-a cock, bhookh-a hunger-y, gurm-a hot-weather, khod self, khod-a god, gung-a the river, doo-a dence, ekka ace, dan-a knowing. this most useful symbol is the ed, d, en, of all verbs, pal-a nourish-ed, bol-a spoken, and as the persian u already mentioned, is universally applied. sometimes a forms a diminutive, peer-a little peer, a proper name, also a vocative affix, buhin-a o sister! yar-a o friend, and adverbial usl-a truly, zahir-a apparent-ly.

an̄ the above vowel nasalized, and though sometimes a masculine final, generally denotes the first state plural of all feminines, in ce, gol-ee bullet, pill, golec-an̄ pills, pal-ee she nourished, palec-an̄ they nourished, thus changed to goliyan̄, paliyan̄, palec̄, for the sounds sake; in duswan̄ tenth, and saqiyan̄ an̄ is masculine. it specifies place, whence yuh-an̄ here, wuh-an̄ there, kuh-an̄ where? juh-an̄ where, tuh-an̄ the same place. an̄ in persian means that, v. ecn, in chuoḥ-an̄ fourth, &c., it implies our th, though generally converted to wan̄.

o always omega, there being no omicron in hindoostanee, and like a, can hardly be made too broad, especially in monosyllabic words; this observation appertains to every long vowel. like a, we find the o an active, transitive sign, in kḥol-na to open, rok-na to stop, v. co. o is both a vocative prefix and affix, as the latter it discriminates the plural of nouns and aorists or imperatives, second person, murd-o o men! a-o come you! if you come. in gola, the o is a substitution, gol-o o ball, in teen-o the three, char-o the four, it has a definite appearance. nor, uo, wu, and, are frequently expressed by o alone, din o rat day and night, but hath-o-hath from hand to hand,

on the plural affix for the second state of every noun by substitution in the first class, and addition in the second, but followed by ne, the on is more of a subjective than objective nature, and occasionally so, without that particle, burson goozre years have elapsed.

oo the short sound of both o and oo, and our own vowel of wool, good, soon, evident in moon light, though eclipsed by sun-shine, which few englishmen call soon-shine, while they make so free with bull and put, as to say bool, poot. by spelling toork, sooltan, moonshee, improperly, they are corrupted to turk, sultan, munshee, as hindoostan is to hindustan, very absurdly. in arabic oo is equivalent to of, 's, but in hinduwee represents w, in oo-dhur there, oos that, oo-pur above, and seems a negative in oo-hoon no, nuy, not-yes, and something similar in oo-turna to-dismount, oo-jarna to eradicate, oo-gulna to reject, chew the cud. as u is the intransitive radical of many verbs, so is oo of others, thus khool-na to open, rook-na to stop, mcood-na to shut, chook-na to finish.

ooṇ seldom if ever occurs, as any thing very significant.

oo invariably the sound heard in fool, with a great affinity to our ridiculous double yoo w, not less a misnomer, than yoo, oo, is of u, the common english sound of which is evident in up, us, never oop, yoop, oos, yooos, use ! oo is an active, adjective, instrumental affix in mar-oo fatal, dekḥa-oo secmly, deedar-oo sightly, hind-oo indian, jhaṛ-oo broom, besom, lad-oo loaded, and substitute for a in baboo lord, master, feminine in ban-oo lady, diminutive in such names as peer-oo, suef-oo. active vowel in verbs, moond-na to shut, chook-na to miss. in arabic passive participles, oo is a prominent character, as their last vowel, muqtool murdered.

ooṇ the subjunctive or aorist particle for the first person singular of all verbs, a-ooṇ if I come, I may come, may I come, ho-ooṇ I be, &c., originally hu-ooṇ, whence hoon am, have, sum, yes, oo-hoon no, this and oṇ before mentioned, are merely different modulations of o, which the arabians either will not, or cannot pronounce, otherwise than oo.

whence called by the chinese buo wuo, as the hindoos use oo-loo for owl, howlet, from its cry oo oo, hoo, hoo. the uo has been transposed in our, house, orthoepigraphically uor huos. this combination is very apparent in the pronouns kuon, who? juon who, tuon he, the same, all of which become ko, jo, and so, it seems convertible with ar, in chuo, char, four, uor, ar, and, more.

uon the nasalized uo, which belongs to this subdivision of vowels, the subsequent wu inclusive, or, oor, uor, wur, being all convertible with each other and ar also already noticed, and to these we may subjoin hu-na to be, hu-a been, becoming progressively ho-na, ho-a, hoo-a, in the modern hindoostance substantive verb, like the ordinary copula esse, which is so very irregular in every language.

wu as a demi-consonant or, semi-vowel, can hardly be uttered alone, its name therefore by 6, is the wu here stated, which the hindoos term wu-kar, the maker or model of this equivocal letter wa, oo, o, uo, in the persi-arabic system, where it is not less a proteus than yu, q. v. our word wall, if written oal would lose nothing in orthoepey, though the existing orthography is no doubt the best, as it obviates the hiatus of oal completely—a fact which will readily account for the future use of the euphonous interfix w, in oriental etymology, when connected with any of the foregoing vowels u, a, oo, uo. compressed to vu, it seems the natural link between the labial consonants and the vowels, in the very way that yu through ju connects i, ee, e, ue, z, ch, g, k, s, h, together. wu applies to remote objects, wu-h, wo-h, woo-h, he, that breather, being, thing, opposed to yu-h, yi-h, ih, this breather, he, she, it, wuh-an that place, there, yuh-an, ech-an, ih-an, this place, here. causal verbs are regularly formed by w as an interfix, pulwana to cause nourish, utukwana to cause stop. such words as jooa game, play, tulooa sole, bottom, are thus euphonised joowa, tulowa, a process which creates the series wu, wa, wo, wo, woo wuo, wi, wee, we, wue, when requisite.

wa may be found, as the euphonous significant particle a, and is man, &c. pesh-wa foreman, lead-er, murd-wa man-ikin, bub-wa, little master, khet-wa small field. in the old hindu-wec, wa means he, whence the we plural still used, and in persian open, chushin-wa open eyed, wa,e alas ! wah bravo !

waŋ the euphonic aŋ, or th in dus-waŋ, dus-wen, 'dusween, tenth, &c. subject to inflection like a, of which aŋ is but the nasal modulation that pervades all the vowels.

woo	$\left. \begin{array}{l} \text{visible in } \text{wooh, } \text{vooh,} \\ \text{cos, } \text{he, she, him, that,} \\ \text{con } \text{them, } \text{those.} \end{array} \right\}$	and might readily wo		enough be pro-
woo		nounced vo, voo,
who		vuo, were they as particles significant.

wi an affected modification of the above woo, whence wis, vis, win, vin, for cos, con, by the indian dandies of the cockney cast.

wee should this ever prove the feminine of the diminutive wa, above, it may account for the scottish wee and the english women, wimmen, as the sex smaller or weaker than men. in donya-wee world-ly, it is the ce merely euphonised, also in esus-wee christian, sufra-wee bilious. v. wa. in the preceding page.

we, ve, for weh, they, the regular first state plural of wa he, q. v.

wue the delusive name of our y as vowel, diphthong and consonant, or semivowel yu, to be consulted in its alphabetical place here. in wue-sa so, thus, like, that, wue-la that side, yon, the ue represents uh, ooh.

wŋ is the true position of this nasal, but it generally appears reversed in gaŋw town, paŋw foot, the 2d state plural of which gaŋwon, paṇwon, is more easily expressed than it could be from pawn, gawn, the more regular first state, but nouns of this description are too few to have required even this animadversion.

i found in ill, sin, shin, never as in sine, shine, or eel, seen. i is to ee and e exactly what oo is to oo and o. this feeble vowel also marks the intransitives kḥinch-na to draw, to be pressed, chḥilna to rub, fret, miṭna to be obliterated. as a prefix or affix it is equivalent to of and sometimes cannot be translated, ṣaḥib i fuoj master of an army, nek murd, or murd i nek good man, when the adjective is transposed. it is the proximate sign in is, this, i-dḥur hither and an arabic efficient in qatil murderer, a, being the other. i has moreover a similar power in numerous active participials, moosif judge, moonkir denier, and is constantly the second last letter of all such examples. v. u.

ee to be now evident, we must see it in a honey bee, though in days of yore, when orthoepigraphy was more in vogue, we could not have confounded to bee with uncle toby, for even hee, shce, were then as familiar as free, see.

tree, glee, lee, &c. are at present. had not ii interfered too much both with english analogy and hindoostance etymology, that combination is the most correct, in one sense, of the two. in challee, a,ee,e, &c. ee or iy is a verbal interfix indicating respect, necessity, &c. the natural feminine and diminutive substitute for the final masculine a, is ee, gol-ee pill, bullet, moorgh-ee hen, at-ee she comes. as a final it is always feminine, when not masculine by nature, but ee may likewise denote masculines, and adjectives, as an affix, especially when the primitive does not terminate in the declinable a. sipah-ee army-man, soldier, puhar-ee mountain-er, highlander, sath-ee companion, from sath with, and hind-ee indian, rusm-ee custom-ary, doonyawee world-ly. as an abstract particle, ee is of frequent occurrence in bhula-ee khoob-ee good-ness, khoda-ee god-head, murd-ee man-hood. the infinitive or participial a, converted to ee, becomes, in certain verbs, ipso facto instrumental, local, and abstract nouns, kutur-nee scissors, koorel-nee poker, orh-nee veil, bustee village, gintee account, dhur-tee world, bolee speech. from kutur-na to clip, &c. in persian verbs ee is invariably the final sign of the second person singular, and affixed to the infinitive indicates propriety, fitness, desert, &c. koosh-tun-ce worthy of death, khoordun-ee eat-able.

emphatically ee is of constant use, and resembles the, very, identical, self, same, indeed, just, at the moment, &c. of our language, in the most concise form imaginable, generally euphonised by h, to hee, yih-ee this very, cos-ee him indeed, muen-hee myself, toojh-ee thee really, thyself, ate-hee on coming, just as he comes, a-hee having come in fact, marhee dala killed outright, positively murdered. this definite particle is of such extensive application that practice only can impart it, nor can its utility as an abstract be fully perceived in any other way, being like our own participials in ing applicable to season, price, mode, &c. kuṭa-ee cutting, harvest, boya-ee sowing, dhola-ee washing, luṛa-ee battle, fighting. in some instances a, ee is the particle, sewuk-a, ee service, toorsh-a, ee sourncss. ee readily changes to iy in kee, a, kiya, done, made, lee, a, liya, taken, and is evanescent in kee, ee, lee, ee, thus kee made, lee taken.

in some arabic, active participles, where yu, wu are the radical letters, the i peculiar to that form of the verb coalesces with those semi-vowels into this long ee, whence hadee guide, da,ee claimant, qa,zee, mooftee judge, moonshee secretary, composer.

ee indicates transitives, ch,heel-na to scrape, rub, k,heen-ch-na, to pull. v. i.

this ee and e may be deemed almost one and the same letter, as the arábians disclaim the last entirely, in which they are followed by particular provinces in persia, while the natives of hindoostan, on the contrary, are as partial to e as to ee and thus always discriminate sher tiger, and sheer milk. see yu.

een the feminine plural of ee, as a contraction of ee,aṇ, iyaṇ, and sometimes only the emphatic ee or hee in that number, hum-heen we indeed, we ourselves, toon-heen you yourselves, in yoo heen thus, wóh-eeṇ the instant, joolheen that moment, too heen then, the een or heen indicates rather manner or time than place, for kuheen somewhere is resolvable to ko,eehaṇ any place. in persian een this, contrasted with aṇ that, but occasionally an adjective sign in pa,een low.

e this long vowel appears in ere, where, there, with the sound heard in air. it seems a contraction of the vocative preposition ue o! in e hap o father! expressed also by he hap! and bap re! as an interfix, immediately after a vowel e supplants i, bundu,e khóda servant of god, moo,e scuffed, scuffed moo white hair, v. i. when e is final, in nine examples out of ten, it will denote the 2d state singular and first plural of all inflectible words, including the three persons plural and masculine of every tense, the subjunctive present or aorist excepted, in which e marks the second and third person singular. all postpositions and adverbials, terminating in e, come directly from their first state in a, thus inflected by some postposition, either expressed or understood, these commonly require ke to precede them, thus gole ke age before a ball, being the elliptical expression of gole ke age men a balls front in, from aga front, fore part. e is an objective postposition among the pronouns only, cos-e him, to him, and a subjunctive termination, pal-e if thou or he nourish. in persian e or ee is both a definite and indefinite affix of unity, gool-e a flower individually, durukht-e the particular tree. active roots have e, khenchna to pull, meina to erase. this symbol is very evanescent among verbs, whence lo take, do give, ho be, hoga will be, instead of le-o, de-o, ho,e, ho,ega, and is apt to become y or vice versa, a,e,a, aya, came, ke,a, kya, what? v: ee. in some words this letter appears redundant, pa, pa,e paw, foot, ja, ja,e place, bula, bula,e evil.

en is a particle or affix for the first state plural of all feminines, which do not end in ee, for the first and third person plural of the subjunctive present tense, and is moreover the plural objective pronominal postposition. bat-en words, ma-en, mothers, pal-en if we and they nourish, hum-en us, to us. affixed to e, one of the vowels will suffer elision or may be euphonized by w, ga-o, ga-e, coo, ga-en, gawen, cows. ue, ui, uee, or various shades of our diphthongal sound in guide, guile, buy, eye, I, and though expressed by the last as the more diminutive iota alone in idea, is evidently a compound of u with e, i, or ee, becoming synthetically the diphthong here required. ue is a vocative preposition, ue lurke o boy! an ordinary substitute for yi, yu, ya, coh, uh, a, uo, uon, o, in ue-sa so, thus, wue-sa like, that, kue-sa how, like what, jue-sa like which, tue-sa like that same, and also in ue-la, wue-la, pue-la, this, that and yon side. in the present indicative of the copula, ue may be traced to hu, the root be, with its aorist affixes e, en, hu-c be, is, hu-en be, are. in muen I, tuen thou, this diphthong is again conspicuous, though formerly mo, moo, was the first pronoun, now obsolete, while too thou, is at present preferred to tuen, and both still preserve the oo in mōjḥ toojḥ me, thee, converted to e in the adjective form, me-ra, te-ra, my, mine, thy, thine, ue, uec, are predominant in kue what, numbers, many, kuce several. in arabic duals ue seems the leading sound supported by n. walid-uen parents, turufuen two sides, reciprocal. v. uo.

yu is apparent in yawn, young, thus yan, yung, and the congenial semivowel of this division, as wu is to the former, on which however the yu often encroaches, so in aya came, soya slept, occasionally a,e,a, so,e,a. this universal euphonic interfix is most extensively applied etymologically in golee-aṇ, goliyaṇ, goliyoṇ bullets, and in every portion of the hindoostanee, v. wu, c. ya convertible with ju links the last class of vowels with z &c. in the very way that the transmutation of wu to vu, does the first set with their cognate labials.

ya a vocative prefix and affix, ya khoda, khoda-ya o god! interfixed, it signifies or, either; as a pronoun formerly he, she, it, whence—yo this, a modification of ya and ye below.

yoṇ so, this way, with wooṇ that way thus, kyoon how, jyoon which way, tyoon that same way, generally prolated ke,on, je,on, te,on, by the vulgar.

yi for yu in yih he, she, it proximate. v. i.

ye (ych) they, being the regular first state plural of the obsolete ya he, &c.

yec would be adopted euphonicallly were not the hiatus commonly obviated by the elision of one ee in kee,ce made, dee,ee gave, lee,ce took, pee,ee drunk, whence kee, dee, &c.

yuo, yue possess no particular meaning, but are merely euphonous syllables whenever they are met with.

yn or ny may exist, but their use must be limited indeed, in the hindoostanee, whatever be their occurrence in other dialects.

hu with me, as a mere breathing, is a semi-vowel and like w, y, l, r, n, d, t, occasionally euphonic interfix, particularly for the emphatic ee, after another vowel. v. ee and hee. h is a spirit or aspiration of infinite importance in human speech, often representing a breather, being, thing, by itself or representatives; hu-na to breathe, be, exist, yi-h this being, he, she, it, woo-h that being, &c. moojh, toojh, me, thee, hum, too-mh, we, you, as breathers, beings, of the 1st, 2d, and 3d persons, numerals wherewith a pronominal affinity may yet be found to exist, when homo, hic, mihi, and the latent inspire of kinh, jinh, tinh, are duly considered, to say nothing of he, her, they, that, &c. in our own tongue. uo, o, ue, with or without n, ñ, seem the uninspired proxies of h in muen, tuen, kuon, juon, tuon, which again becomes perfectly visible in kinhon, jinhon, tinhon, their second state plural. as the final of sanskrit nouns h discriminates their first state singular, but so inaudibly, that u only is heard, and the same thing happens to persian words, the last consonant of which is vowelised thus, chushm eye, chushm-u (not chushmuh) fountain. when h is a real inspire in the contractions muh, shuh, for mah, shah, month, king, the h must be then fully expressed, never being mu, shu, only. this and the letter r is more perversely abused by the engli-h than any other in the alphabet. where they are requisite and essential, both are often omitted, and on the contrary, when perfectly superfluous, each is thrust in most absurdly, even in their mother tongue, but this crosspurpose mode of pronouncing in the hindoostanee would, especially with the aspirate, lead to very offensive or obscene blunders on many occasions which every gentleman would do well to avoid.

ha expired is the general sign of the first state plural of persian inanimates, sometimes extended to animated beings also. it is an adjective or affix of agency in keeru-ha worm-y, duora-ha runner, tel-uha oily, in which and others there is evidently a slight elongation to a disyllable. the inspire ah means a sigh, ah-en, ahon sighs, and is much more expressive than our english word, which in scottish mouths however becomes sihs, with a deep impressive inspiration like the ah above.

han yes, a mere modification of hoon am.

ho, (or hoo, the hu made long) be thou, ho,o (or hoo,o for hu,o) be yon, in which the last o is generally dropt.

hoon, huon for hu,oon be, am, yes, formerly the I, which with us also means yes.

hee the euphonous emphatic ee, een, q. v.
heen from hoon, whence nu-heen no, not, nay.

he o! he murd o man.

hue art, is, regularly be and pronounced like our interjection hae, hy, so often heard in the streets of london, when calling to a person, whence most probably the present unmeaning hue and cry was at first the real hae or hue and cry after any body running away.

huen are, also the true aorist of hu-na to be, and the plural of hue, meaning we be, they be. mu being in facility of enunciation next to the vowels, it precedes the rest of the labials, even with infants and lambs, among whom ma ma is easier than the oriental baba, or occidental papa. it is transmutable through nu with lu, ru, hu, su, u, bu, o, and has every where a peculiar affinity with the first personal muen, mun, me, moi, my, me-ra, mihi, &c. when the vowel is prefixed as in um, or m, the final of a word, it alone implies I or I am in persian, thus resembling the latin sum I am, as mu does me, mu-ra to me, me. ma ma, ce mother, ma-ter, mata, madur all prove the predominance of in maternally, and it is equally conspicuous as a mortal symbol in murd man, mur-na, mcor-dun, mori, or moriri, to die. in persian ma means we, ma murd we mortals, people. mu in arabic marks passives, actives, and locals, &c. muqtool killed, muqtul slaughter-house, moonkir denier, miştur rule, mcoqatulu carnage. mo olim-me, mor my, mine, moo hair, moonh face, mouth. mco, see mu above. um denotes the feminine of beg-um, khan-um, lord, lady. mah, mas, month, moon, moh pity, muo town, muya sympathy, mue wine, mui with, bu mui along with, muen I, men in, on, among, menh, minh rain. these form a string of monosyllables that may range under mu with some advantage to the learner, while studying this important letter, which in khwah mu khwah volens, volens, stands for nu, and also in the imperative prohibitive particle mu, mut dont, where t seems merely a euphonous termination.

bu with its aspirate bhu, is exactly the greek beta and our bee in abhor, and moreover a persian preposition resembling our by, to, with, in, or the adverbial affix ly. bu-khoo-bee with propriety, properly, as bi, boo, it precedes many persian imperatives expletively, boogo speak, bidih give, &c. bu-ja in place, a propos. ba is just the bu elongated, ba aram with rest or ease. it means father, which repeated gives ba ba, like ma-ma; this second letter of the alphabet often denotes two, in composition variously modified as be, bi, bir, evident in bis, biped, bicennial, and sometimes dis, bilugna to disjoin. b is a prominent letter in some oriental futures, as abo, ibo, i-vo, wish or will go? while ba, boo, resemble our own be. boo stands for ba in baboo, father, patrician, and bo-na means to sow. bo, boo smell, fragrance. be without, a privative particle of constant recurrence, and the very opposite of ba. ba hoormut with honour, be hoormut disgraced, be kuhe without orders, be-ja wrong, mal à-propos, out of place, as an interfix be occurs in ja be ja, here and there. be is the second state of ba, u-be sirrah. bee, ba,ce, the feminine of ba, and consequently like the duplicate bee-bee means dame, lady, one bee which must be carefully distinguished from another aspiring bhee also, b represents bar, ber, ver, time, vicissitude, season, spring, &c. in ub now, this time, ku-b when ? jub when, tub then, still traceable in septem-ber, &c. ab water, lustre, ueb vice.

pu phu exist in up hill, in the east baba, father, son, child, is the most familiar to the nursery, while papa seems the favorite labial of the west, though ranked only the second here, that the ph may come next its more appropriate substitute fu below. pu for pur signifies on, but, ph as a radical implies expansion, blowing, flowering, in phuel-na to spread, phool-na to flower, phoonk-na to blow, puff, and phen froth, phaha flake. pa is an affix in moṭa-pa, &c. fat-ness, and means the paw, foot, variously prolated pa,e, paṇw, puer, whence puer-na to swim or foot it in the water. ap self, worship, sire, and apa an honourable term among the marhutas, are not unlike our papa, which is the name given to the pope, by the hindoostanees. this ap in the adjective form, and 2d state becomes up-na own, self, &c. v. na. pa,o, puo a quarter, has an apparent similitude in sound and sense to pa, paṇw, a leg or hind quarter, whence pue-sa a farthing. pcc-na to drink, pee, piya, husband, lover, pue, pa,c paya foot, fourth, trace, whence pa,el, puel, peel, surefooted, becomes feel elephant, haṭṭee, hustuk, the synonyme means handy, docile, pue-zar slipper, pue dur pue successively, foot after foot. puh a verbal root connected with primary objects, perhaps from puh day break, dawn, whence puh-ur watch, puh-la first, puhul-wan champion. op lustre, op-na to polish, op-chee clad in armour.

ti in fec, fi, is obvious enough, and these are equivalent to our at, in, per, by, but ti has generally the arabic definite l after it. fil-hal at present, fee guz per yard, the hindoos having no such character, phu above, or pu is substituted both by them and the persians, and for this very reason the peel just noticed may be feel, the arabs having no p.

vu is the learned expression of wu, which reduplicated insensibly produces v in nuwwab viceroy, pronounced nuvab, and its corruption nabob! is the natural consequence, v being the nearest gradation from o oo and semi-vowel w to the consonant bu, as ju is from i, e, ee, yu, to z, ch, &c. the hindoostanee dandies are fond of showing their metropolitan manners and breeding, by converting w on most occasions to v, thus, cos, wis, vis, win, vin, from wooh, vooh, he, she, it. v. nu.

nu the first of the lingui-dentals, follows the labials from its intimate connection with their leader mu, both of which are obvious enough as consonants in the moon, where n will be clear as the day in noon, the very persi-arabic name of the symbol now under discussion. n when attenuated, to what is called the french nasal, lapses into its concomitant vowels already exhibited, in the whole of which the oscillation between n and ṇ is arbitrary in the extreme, and the elision or assumption of the ṇ equally so, in the different dialects of hindoostan by particular classes of people, numbers of whom may conceive, that the nasal twang stamps their language as the sterling speech of certain cities, provinces, or tribes, who affect this absurd embellishment, either as a mark of their haut ton or profound erudition, similar to the introduction of v on all occasions, for wu, the less refined of the two, and not unlike our cockneys, who from ignorance or affectation, thus confound wine, vine, weal, veal, wiper, viper, with each other.

nu forms the second state plural of several pronouns, in, these, con those kin, jin, tin, whom, &c. sometimes n like y, w, h, l, d, t, seems a euphonic interfix, doona double, as in hominis, &c. it seems a negative, privative, genitive, possessive, infinitive, adjective symbol, in various tongues. nu, na, no, and un, dis, less, &c. in composition. up-na own, a-na to come, jag-na to awaken, doo-na double, chob-cen wood-en. the modifications are several, ni, nir, un, n, ni-kumma. useless, nir-as disappointed, un-scona unheard. nul, nue. tube, pipe, reed, nu-heen nay, no, nemo, nihil, ninny, nullus, all likewise evince the inanity or pithless nature of this letter, which also as in or un, discriminates the feminines of certain words from the masculines, malee gardener, malin his wife or daughter, dhobee washerman, dhobin -woman, and the diminutives peer-un, meer-un, of proper names. affixed un is the adverbial ly or preposition by, ittifaq-un accidentally, by chance. nu stands for or in koochh nu koochh something or other, kuheen nu kuheen somewhere or other.

na, besides its negative meaning as a prefix, is the possessive affix in the reflective pronoun ap self, and the infinitive sign of all verbs translated by our prefix to, or the latin re, which if to be really the verb do, na may in all probability, possess a congenial meaning in some ancient dialect. na, na_o, naw, na_e, ship, boat, navis, must have some relation to their inane form, as well as to nare to swim.

nuh means finger nail, nuya, nuo, new, also nine, nue tube, pipe, recl. nee is the feminine of na and an affix in mor- peacock, -nee-hen, and some others. ne is the second state singular and first plural of na, equivalent to ke, as nee is to kee in the adjective form of ap self, and in the infinitive sign also.

ne may be met with as the metrical elongation of nu no, but in general ne alone is an extraordinary postposition of the first state in respect to signification, though of the second in appearance, forming that species of anomaly in philology which exists in the animal economy, when a vein performs the office of an artery. in other words, the second state of nouns followed by ne has the meaning in english of the first only. gole ne cos ko mara, the ball hit him, goloŋ ne coŋ ko mara the balls hit them, coŋ ne gole ko phenka, he threw the ball, coŋ ne goloŋ ko phenka, they threw the balls. every declinable word, muen and tuen excepted, comes under this rule. muen ne mara I hit, tuen ne mara thou hitest. ne however can be affixed only to the subjects of transitive preterite tenses, in the composition of which there is not a present participle. v. lu, ru, and su.

ngu is that peculiar nasal created by the junction of n with g or k, in thing, think, for which there exists no simple character in any alphabet, as the mere juxta position of the n with either of those gutturals is considered sufficient to produce the sound required, though it must be admitted that g is more or less heard in certain examples than others, and is in fact a nicety which should be left to practice only. this invisible modification of n is less attenuated than ŋ and bears that sort of affinity to g and k, which ŋ has with all the vowels, still by no means so palpable as when the u coming in contact with m, b, p, l, r, naturally deviates to the more congenial letters m, l, r, in immediate, imbibe, impossible, illegal, irrational. the bias or predilection which n has to g, is conspicuous enough in ignoble, ignorant, a combination that the french express by inyorant very distinct from ng of bring, brink, bringk, and one perhaps peculiar to that nation, though the hindoos too can boast of their own appropriate nj, nyu, nk, ng, nd, &c. each a nasal sui generis that might be termed dental, guttural, and so on, were such minute distinctions necessary in rational grammar.

lu of lull, appears, variously elongated, a convenient letter, like the l of anima-l, in ul, el, la, ala, wal, wala, ol, ola, loo, uel, ael, uela, eela, &c. which are all mere particles denoting agency, quality, existence, possession, and wherever they are affixed to another word or syllable, it may be deemed the primitive or root. prefixed to ana to come, l gives lana to bring, resolvable still to lena to take and ana. le, leo, lo take, hold, behold, lo! see! exhibit a strange concatenation of vision and touch. the prefix la is negative, la-juwab unanswerable, speechless. lee, feminine of la, which in the second state becomes le, la, le, lec. l plays the part of a euphonic in those verbs where two open vowels would otherwise meet, as in dholana to wash, khalana to feed, pilana to administer any liquid, which regularly are dho,ana, kha,ana, pee,ana. the transmutation of l to n, r, s, h, and to some vowels even, is not restricted to the hindoostanee more than other languages, and it probably approximates as much to the vowels as w, y, h, and though not treated by me as a semivowel even, the hindoos class li and ri among the former, for reasons best known to their hair splitting grammarians. as the arabic article ul, l, is subject to a variety of changes to s, sh, t, d, &c. all trace of it is lost in words whose initials are not b, j, h, kh, gh, f, q, k, m, y. luo signifies love, and is perhaps only a conversion of or to, lar, lur, lar-la darling, lur-ka child, love's gift, lue, luee, paste, la,ee, layee she brought. ol hostage, ola, hail. ru is heard in roar, and is produced by a complete and forcible vibration of the tongue's tip on the roof of the mouth and close to the foreteeth, a sound which is perfectly easy to irish and scottish organs of speech, but often very difficult to englishmen, who seldom can pronounce it well enough to please a french ear in the word l'amour, but what is most extraordinary, they omit it almost entirely in many words where this letter exists, and perversely insert it where no symbol of the kind is necessary, whence their absurd idcar, fellowr, and baad, regaad, for bard, regard.

the two last examples prove the consanguinity or correlation between this consonant and the vowels, in which l and n largely partake, either from their interchangeableness with r, or something peculiar to this set of lingui-dento-palatials in most languages, whence the french plurals from the singular l are so prone to become aux. it is even possible thus to account for some latent affinity in wood, wild, and the caledonian epithet wud, for mad, wild, with other coincidences of the same nature, besides our could as the mere transmutation of canned, to called, like shalled, willed, mayed, to should, would, might, and probably this last has some relation to must also, as this implies the necessity that right is too often under of stooping to might, nolens volens, and has been twisted to must accordingly, through may, mayed, might, must. few letters seem more essential to human speech than l, n, r, for these two in particular are every where evident among infinitives, adjectives, and pronouns, even we cannot dispense with them in mine, our, their, to ope, open, wooden, any more than the hindoo-stanees in me-ra, hum-ara, khol-na, chob-een. v. lu, and the subsequent significant particles. as a simple euphonic r will no doubt frequently occur, sometimes however with the aid of s in doosra second, teesra third, instead of doowaṇ, teenwaṇ, the regular form, which can seldom be found in any dialect for the three first ordinal numbers. in sona-r gold-smith, loha-r iron-smith, this certainly is a potent sign of agency, not less important than in love-r, and as l had its peculiar modifications so has r; thus ar, har, hara, ara, yar, yara, er, era, ora, are all significant finals or affixes denoting the action, quality, situation, &c. of the radical to which they are attached, so, dil-er heart-y, bold, brave, daring, impudent. sometimes the r becomes ṛ in bḥugora deserter, huṇs-ora laugh-er. ra, re, rec (euphonised in the plural to ara, are, aree), is the sign of the adjective form for the first and second personals, as na, ne, nee, is for the reflective pronoun, both equivalent to the ka, ke, kee, in all other words, and of the same import with of, or rather 's. v. ku. in persian, ra signifies to or merely discriminates the objective and subjective from each other and is probably the only real postposition in that elegant tongue. o-ra to him, him, o he. re, rec, are hindoo-stanee vocative affixes, bap-re o father! ma-ree o mother! which can be elongated and trans-

posed to ure-bap, uree-ma. reh fuller's earth, rah-ee way-farer, roo face, rooh spirit, rue rate, ratio, ruce bran, ra,ee mustard, ra,e opinion, prince. ruo go, goer. ro weep, ar shutter, ar uor more, or side, this and similar lists, under the various letters, constitute a chain of significant monosyllables worth remembering.

ru is the ru made obtuse, by reversing the tip of the tongue and striking it forcibly on the roof of the mouth by which process all the vibration of r is obliterated, as this sound is in fact only the oral expression of the written du below, or literally ghoḍa becomes only in the mouth ghoṛa horse. ṛh the aspirate is observable in guṛh, guḍh fort, very different from ghur house and gur if. ṛ is rarely used as a significant particle except when substituted for r, above explained, still in certain vocables this ṛ has some meaning ; chḥokṛa child, luo-ṛa membrum virile, kḥel-ar wanton, kuṭ-ar dagger, chum-ṛa skin, chum-ar skin-ner. pug, pug-ṛa, pug-ṛee turbands of various sizes kḥal, kḥulṛa, kḥulree hide, skin, cuticle. or, oṛa, uṛ, when affixed, are mere variations of ar v. ru.

ḍu, ḍḥu are the formal archetypes of ṛ, ṛh, as harsh palatial dentals much more so than d of dub, is to the d of due, dupe in english. if these ever possess a literal meaning, it is not easily traced in dal-na to pour, cast, throw. were we even to analyze it d-lana to produce or bring d, though from dalna we may derive dal arm, bough of a tree thrown or cast out from the trunk, as dala branch, dalee twig, shoot. how far these remarks may yet reflect some light upon unda egg, gand anus, and testis, rand widow, sand bull, handee pan &c. &c. time and experience alone can tell, for I hardly think the research quite unfathomable.

du, dhu, the soft labial dentals described under tu q. v. as these d, dh, are almost the same letters with t, th, in fact the d and t constantly distinguish the third person singular of all tenses as the t does in latin, with this difference that the persians prefer d, and it is only when by chance the t in that person precedes the regular formation d, that this last is omitted. d and t are both conspicuous characters in the persian infinitives, which all terminate in dun or tun, the open un here being apparently euphonized by the interfix d or t. d is a radical peculiar to the verb de-na to give, also to number two, to the divinity, and day. diya denotes gave, and light, deota deity, data generous, to which a string of concurrent words might be added, were this

do, contracted from de,o, means either give or two, and is frequently pronounced doo, especially in derivatives, doona double, but doora second, is euphonized to doosra, and do,oṇ in the same way becomes dono, donon both, the two, in the second state, n being the euphonic interfix and quite unnecessary in the other cardinals teenon, charon, &c.

doon if I give, may I give. dec for dec,ee gave, de give or having given, den, duen, giving, duya kindness, charity, duhee curds. ad first, whence ad-uṇu the first man, adam. od moisture, oḍ aloes wood, ēḍ holiday.

ṭu, ṭhu bear the very same relation to t and ṭh, that ḍ and ḍh do to ḍ, ḍh, that is they resemble, as harsh palatials dentals, those letters heard in tub, tun, when compared with these in tube, tunc, only that the harshness is still more perceptible when ata coming, baṭ road are contrasted with bat word, aṭa flour, or bḥat boiled rice, and bḥaṭ minstrel. these dento palatials seem as seldom radical symbols as their congenial ḍ, ḍh, are, but like them they frequently glide into the next set of labial dentals q. v.

ṭho is occasionally admitted in counting. v. to. wuṭ and ahuṭ are abstract affixes in kuṛwa-huṭ bitter-ness, bōla-wuṭ invitation, jḥunḥun-ahuṭ jingling, aṭ flour, oṭ shelter, ueṭ, ueṭa are significant in buḡḥ-ueṭa young tiger, buhmū-ueṭa priestling, chuṛḥ-ueṭ, chuṛḥ-ueṭa rider, horseman, aṭḥ eight, in composition changes to uṭḥ, us, ur.

tu ṭhu are soft labial dentals formed by a protrusion of the tongue towards the lips when articulated, and ṭh is the simple expired t of nuthook, the th of thin, thine, never appearing in the hindoostance, though they do certainly belong to the arabic alphabet. the grand difference between both classes of dentals is the protrusive prolation of t, ṭh, opposed to the appulsive expression of d, dh, ṭ, ṭḥ, by the tongue being reverted on the roof of the mouth in the very act of pronunciation. ṭh seems the root of ṭhook-na to spit, on the principle of sound and sense, in various instances re-echoing each other. ṭhoo ṭhoo is a natural effort to eject a thread, hair or fibre of any sort, with that very organ of which we may say truly that it is ready enough, ṭhoo-ṭhoo kurna to play-tḥoo tḥoo even with saliva, whence the expressive contractions ṭhook-na to spit, ṭhook spittle, and our nut-

the initial t denotes the pronoun is the second person singular almost universally, and aided with its twin brother d the number two too, it moreover discriminates the correlative series of pronominals, &c. in hindoo-stanee from all the rest, thus tuon, tis, tub, tud, tuhan, to, tno, and many more. the modern interfix t for the root of the verb and its perfect sign a, was anciently an affix, pal-t-a nourishes, bol-t-a speaks, olim palut, bolut, and in persian this is a pronominal adjunct to this day. suri to and surut, being the head of thee or thy head indifferently ; besides the recurrence of the symbol under consideration in the self same person and number of all the tenses in our mother tongue art, wast, hast, will, &c. &c. this may be styled etymological acumen run mad, did not a method shine through such madness that may soon dazzle the noisy overwhelming ridicule of fools into the respectful but most expressive silence of conviction itself, because all these wonderful coincidences never can be attributed to mere accident and blind chance only.

if we can prove that number one is intimately blended with the congenial idea of a first person, the transition to two representing the second will be apparent enough, by the plainest induction, applied to all mankind in the early stage of their existence. v. su. t not only represents two, but is likewise the leading initial of every word connected numerically with three, thus tee, ti, tree, tir, te, all occur, and while the latin verbs assume the s for the second person singular, they invariably retain final t for the third, as some confirmation of pronominal and numerical affinity, for t as a euphonic we may search the persian infinitives v. d. ta means for, to, till, ta ki in order that, for that. tha, the, thee, stand for was, were, &c. thah bottom, u-thah bottom-less. as an affix ta implies ness, ing, &c. sum-ta same-ness, bol-ta speak-ing, and this again modified to ut iyut aiut is evident in admiyut humanity, shukhsiyut self importance, padshah-ut kingdom, punch-aiut jury of fire, &c. transposed to-at this specifies a variety of arabic plurals, warid-at accidents, moofrid-at simples in booh-tat abundance we trace the derivation from buhoot much, under the form of uet man, er, r, are denoted; birchhuet spear-man, dukuet robber, dhurnuet dunner. too, toon, tuen, thou, give toom you, and te is the old representative of se. tuh, fold, ply, to, tis, that, also, then, and in persian to, too, t, thou. tuo, tub, then, well. ṭho in ek ṭho, do ṭho, teen ṭho, is used as we say there goes one of any number counting at the time, and though rather a vulgar word may come from the root of ṭhuhurna to stop, rest, remain, contracted to ṭho, a particle very opposite to the expletive pronominal and consecutive to mentioned above, which moreover occasionally represents indeed, well, do, even, nti is an old word for very, still to be encountered in particular dialects.

tue ply, fold, evidently some literal twist from tuh, besides being the correlative of kue how may, kuec several, jue so many, tue that many, tue passing over, tue-kurnia to cross, tueṇ to, for, though a compound postposition, may nevertheless prove a sonorous nasal conformation of the preposition ta just explained, but thus represented by the more euphonous tueṇ to hindoostanee organs of hearing and speech combined, since these even admit of ke tueṇ ko, oske tueṇ ko to him, upne tueṇ ko himself, &c. where ko has a very redundant appearance at least both in sense and sound. ṭh is either the radical of ṭha was or tha-na place, perhaps an obsolete verb to place, the past tense of which would regularly be tha,a, by elision tha was, as suh-na to suffer, bear, may once have had its antecedent tuh-na to be, tuha, tha been, was, may thence be deducted.

su of us, hiss, sin, this, never as in is, iz! was, waz! his, hiz! as, az! no such supercession being admissible in this orthoepigraphical scheme, as these perverse examples demonstrate in english.

s indicates consecution, instrumentality, association, and the very reverse, viz. separation. in the first sense we have secundus second, secundum according to, secutus and sequi to follow, suh-na, su-huna to be with one, to suffer. if our first be reducible to fore-st, second follows of course the one in front, and thus we arrive at the second personal sign in every latin tense being a final s, as the third is always t, though in english a transposition and transmutation of these pronominal affixes has been made, but when, where, why, and by whom, are questions, which time may yet answer better than I now can. art, is, hast, hath, lovest, loveth, and so on will so far explain what I mean.

the foregoing premises may also pave the way to se, sitee, (for our prepositions with, by, to, at, of, from), as hindoostanee postpositions in ap-se, se ipse, of itself, spontaneously. se than, sa, se, see, son, like, or the affix of discrimination, similitude, quantity, and tendencies, illustrated in kuonsa, juonsa, tuonsa, kuesa, uesa, wuesa, kuesa, juesa, tuesa, buhoot-sa, &c. a great deal, kala-sa black-ish, &c. these are all referable to the same source, as well as sath with, along with, from su-at and hath hand, sat, h-ee an associate, or person at hand for good or evil deeds, an accomplice, su-kha, sukhee mess mate, companion, sujjun lover. s marks the second state singular of most pronouns, as e does the same in the nouns belonging to the first class, e and s are consequently substituted affixes in gole 2d state of gola ball 1st state, a species of inflection likewise applicable to yih. is, woch, oos, kuon, kis, joun, or jo, jis, tuon, or so, tis, ko, ee, kooch, h, kisee, kisoo, and in one sense to kya (formerly kula) kahe. v. nu, on which we may here remark, that like s, n is an affix by substitution for the second state plural, on the same principle of all nouns of the first class, being denoted by substituted particles in both numbers, which are equally subject to inflection, whereas in the second class the singular of the whole is totally indeclinable, and all the inflective plural affixes are additions to the word, in its first or nominative state, whatever the termination of that may be.

s, or the apostrophe 's, in our tongue seems, when viewed through a proper light, a very appropriate symbol of the consecutive, possessive, genitive case or adjective form in any language, as the second in order from the first case, or that state of association which exists between one person or thing and another, whence the intimate connection every where demonstrable in many genitives and adjectives in all tongues. the persian i and our of, ov, uv, ub do not however reflect much information on this curious theme, till we recollect that b, p, f, v, are all labials, the principal of which stands for two in ambo both, his twice, biped, and bring moreover into notice the welsh ap, irish o, scottish mak, m-ak, and hindoostanee ka easily reduced to sa, when we advert to the soft c or see, becoming k before a in call, while in cell there is such a see saw, that the deafest and blindest etymologist must hereafter hear and see through thousands of similar instances the glaring reciprocity of sa, se, see, ka, ke, kee even should he fail to reach by fair induction all the objects of the present lucubrations. these ascend high enough or descend so deep, that soul may almost shine from self, as su-elf, or the animating spiritual associate of every human elf, clearly heard in alpha, and better seen in the persi-arabic ulif, still a visible enough, but diminutive hieroglyphic of man, à la distance, of whom the greek α barely denotes his caput mortuum, or the head for the whole figure, on a very minute scale.

su and hu so often play at bopeep in dus, duh, ten, mah, mas, month, chah-na to choose, yih is, wooh, cos, that we must not startle at the coincidence of spirit with ho-na, hustun, to be, breathe, live, in some one or other of their derivatives, so huwa air, bhoot, bhoot-na, sprite, imp, elf, ghost, a word that in the original may yet preserve the aspirated gh in its true prolation ghost, and one which by an ordinary metamorphosis might actually constitute the persian gosht flesh, with hardly so much blood or bones as all our modern wights, or wihts of this species have, on investigation, been found to contain.

the second letter of the alphabet some how or other is a substitute for two, and see the soft ku, being third in order, has it seems the same privilege in the persian si three in si-tara the three stringed instrument that we call a guitar, where s changes to g brother german to k, while in aster star, sitara, tara, there is no such discordance among these spheres. sah merchant, banker, probably connected with shah king.

so the same, so, he, &c. so sleep thou, so, o sleep you, both the verb and correlative, are not less consequential, than substance and shadow, labour and rest, so-na may therefore very congenially mean to rest, lie down, sleep, and it would not be stretching the allusion too far, were we to trace supna dream, from s and upna self, when asleep.

soo, sco, a prefix implying good, soo-chal good conduct, (scor good spirit, angel, sooruj, scor-aj sol, sun, as guardian of the day), whence so-na, soo-na gold and perhaps sleep, both of which the eastern people deem soo good, and love as dearly as, if not better, than their own souls.

suo, sue 100. sayu shade, sa,ee zealous, sa,ee earnest to bind a bargain, sa,een lord, master, sahee porcupine, su,ee exertion, sce-sa lead, as, a wheel, hope, desire. as-pas around, os that, him, &c. os dew, is, this, him, her, it.

shu of shin, where the aspiration is lost in a new modulation of the s of sin, and of course h has become a mere subservient here, which, though the first instance, will not be the last of a similar nature in the representation of oriental symbols that we cannot by single letters express, but it is so far lucky, this h is the only character of the whole at all applicable to such a subordinate purpose, for the u of the diphthongs uo, ue, is perceptible enough, as their first constituent element, though synthetically somewhat obscured.

this letter as a significant particle or affix is not extensively used, except for abstracts in ing, ion, &c. posh-ish cover-ing, saz-ish bund-ish, collusion, azma-csh trial, in which last the common ish after a, is written csh. in persian ush is an affix indicating occasionally the third personal pronoun, shah, shuh, king, monk, &c. sho in composition a washer, shue thing, ʋesh pleasure, shee-shu bottle, shee-shee vial.

zu and zhu are both evident in zone, azure, jour, zhoor, a day, and exactly to each other what s and sh are in sine, shine. this french zh occurs seldom in hindoostanee, therefore such words as journey never become zhurne. uz, z, zu imply, when introduced from the persian, from, of, to, than, za, ze, zee, za-du, za-dee born indicate son, daughter, mir-or mecr-za knight, literally a lord's son, shah-

ju, jhu, palpable cognates of the foregoing, but in a less complex form than the following q. v. recollecting, that while they are composed of tsh, these here are equivalent to dzsh, both being real dento sibilants. ju, is the leading characteristic of the relatives or consecutives, personals, locals and temporals, juon, jo, jis, jin, juhan, jidhur, jyoon, joheen, juheen, jub, juesa, jitna, jita, jue. j through the medium of yu is transmutable with i, e, ee, and by z to s, q. v. and with g it may even become w, k, &c. ja go bears almost a similar relation to a, come, and a very congenial affinity with ga, ge, gee, the future affix to the aorist of every hindoostanee verb. guya (for jaya) went, seems a relation of gang, gaed in the scottish dialect. ja-na to go, impresses the idea of motion from—while a-na to come, does that of motion to—an object, on some principle rather as yet more concealed than elucidated by the latin i-re to go, and ven-ire to come, unless we imagine that i-re properly applies to move, and ven, ben, be, bu, by, anciently meant near. the vocable aj namely this day, to day may be viewed as a curious formation of a- come, and ja- go, to specify a well defined intermediate space of time, that comes and goes with each successive revolution of the earth on its axis, including both night and day. un-aj corn, daily food, so far confirms this notion.

ja, ja,e, place, jah dignity, rank, jo who, that, which, if, though, jo,ce whoever, juo barley, ja,o go, jee life, live, yes, sir, master, jue victory. jun-na to bring forth, bear, is deducible from j the radical for life, soul, with an-na to bring, that is to bring to life, as the young of any animal are brought into existence by their mothers; jun, juna (yun, un-us; one,) is therefore synonymous with za in muha-jun high born, great one, scowur ka juna pig or sow's son. jh is the substituted particle of the two pronominals mucn I, tuen thou, in the second state singular, whence moojh me, toojh thee.

chu, chhu, may readily be found, not upon a kirk, but church-hill, and in their dento sibilant state will be easily recognized, though written tshurtsh,hill, which, had c been treated by us with the justice discernible in j above, curc,hill would have been a neater mode, at least, for representing the italian c of tshitshiro, ceciro, degraded in our mouths to siscero, but we must confess, that english eyes would have made kurkhill out of curehill, in spite of their own teeth, and the most reiterated instructions on such a subject. this dento sibilant has in several languages an obscure connection with thing, in words like hech, cheez, choze, koochh, chi, which, whilk. chu, chee, cechu, are diminutive affixes, but chee also stands for our er, r. ccr, bundooq-chee musquet-ccr, tumboor-chee drumm-er. chhee fy ! chhee chheè fy fy ! chhu, chhe six, in composition the ch is decompounded to s. q. v. soluh s'xteen is a condensation of chhu nor dus as our eleven is from eleve one, and two eleve for twelve. cha, cha,c, tea, chah desire, choice, love, either, or, also a well, char, chuo four. ku, khu the simple and aspirated gutturals of kirkhill. as a significant letter k implies action, possession, agency, interrogation, and diminution, in kur hand, do, make, act, &c whence kur-na to do, perform, work, kur-tar creator, paluk adopted, murd-uk mannikin, kam-ka usc-ful. kuon, kya, kis, kin, kahe, kuhan, kidhur, kyoon, kub, kues-a, kitua, kita, kue, but the k does not always refer to interrogatives, because the above words may occasionally be introduced relatively, and ko,ce, koochh any, somebody, thing, &c. with ku-heen (from ko,ce-an) some place, some where, kuee several, are by no means interrogatory expressions inherently, as kuon, &c. for the most part are.

ka, ke, kee, probably the guttural proxy for the soft consecutive sa, se, see, already described, and thence a more congenial representative of our 's than of. this postposition is a clear genitive, possessive, or an adjective sign, not unlike the us, a, um, in latin, with the extraordinary power nevertheless of inflecting the declinable words to which it belongs, as a governing postposition retrospectively, while in its capacity of an adjective sign, it prospectively agrees with the subsequent noun in state, number, and gender. in short the ka, ke, kee, is a sort of philological janus which looking back governs, or forwards falls into concord with those nouns it is connected, either in its front or rear. gole ka aga a ball's front, gole ke age men in the front of a ball, before a ball, golon ke purde the covers of balls, golon kee jugih men instead of balls, gole-kee turuf a ball's side, towards a ball. kee is the contracted feminine of kiya made, for kee,ee. ke, kur, having, as, ly, a-ke or a-kur having come, sometimes a-kurkur, and a or a,e only which have all the same pluperfect participial meaning. kyoon-kur as how, because, jan-ke knowingly, soch-kur deliberately, or such kur as true. ko, koo, koon, to, for, at, or simply the objective sign, without any visible meaning, when the case called accusative is denoted by this postposition ko, which I conceive a modification of kur, ke, kee, koo, koon, the old root of kur-na kur-dun, to hand, do, as no letter is more apt to become a vowel than r. should this conjecture prove correct, it may illustrate some latent association between our do, to, the verbs da-re, da-dun, de-na, all signifying to give, perhaps to hand, and as dust in persian means hand, with du for the initial radical letter, which is final in hath hand, it is possible we may thus account for do, doo, two, duo, representing this number, our hands being two only. too also may spring from the same source, since bhee seems only the b for two, with an emphatic hee affixed, as too is a mere orthographic deviation from the numeral itself.

kuo is an old word for ka of, thus likewise resolvable from kur, kuo, ka, like char, chuo, and kur, hand being attached to the body in the intermediate state evidently between it and every tangible object, kuo, ka, ke, kee, are the natural links for one noun with another, so bap ka beta, father's son, bap kee betec father's daughter, meaning father, join or hand son, daughter, and any thing else in this consecutive, possessive, adjective form. bon-hand what? vir, bon-us; famina-bon-a; negotium, bon-um, these particles no doubt implying the consecution, junction, handing, now so conspicuous in ka, ke, kee, to unlock whose origin I have at last found the true etymological key or plastic telescope, through which kur the hand, appears like truth at the very bottom of this philological well, sometime ago judiciously fathomed by Horne Tooke, and recently by the Rev. James Gilchrist, a unitarian minister, and perhaps the acutest etymologist of the present age, whose grammatical labours will yet be in vogue, when the common herd of his competitors and their works shall be consigned to merited oblivion, the moment that reason becomes, as it ought always to have been, the grand arbiter of language, and every other useful science. koo, opposed to soo, implies caco, bad, &c. koo-chal misconduct, koo-dhung unnannerly, and probably a dog has therefore been stigmatized koo-kur, kcotta, evil doer, but we have curtailed the koo-kur to cur, which alone is enough with us to give a poor dog, whether mad or not, a very bad name. it is amusing to read what Walker and Johuson observe on the word curtail, which in my eyes is merely the euphonic twist of cut-tail, where one of the dentals changes to r, as frequently happens in the hindoostanee to this very cut and many more—kaṇa to cut, kaṭ-ta cutting, cuts, being oftener pronounced karta, uṭh-tees, urtees, thirty-eight. we need not wander so far from home for a still better proof in curtain, should this be nothing more than cut-train under a cloud, that may be dispelled at once by light reflected from a curtain, either being generally cut in two, or the divisor of two bastions, which it both separates and connects in fortification, according to the idea formed of its use as a curtain.

ki that, who, which, thus, saying, or, when, perhaps this also is a very diminutive type of kur, koo, which in the persian even are roots of kur-dun, kur-na, kee-na, to do, koo-num I do, I hand, act, and koon means do, act, also actor, &c.

ak, uk, k, mark agents, &c. puer-ak swimmer, sewu-k servant, mend-uk frog, from ditch, ghuo-k croaker or frog, which calls ghuo, ghuo, in the east with the genuine northumberland burr, and the diphthongal buo, wuo, of a dog, so distinctly that these amphibious hindoostanee croakers, in their nocturnal salutations across an intervening pool, could alone teach a new comer to that country, both the vowel and consonant of ghuo, ghuo, to perfection, were he only to listen, with tolerable ears, for a few nights running, to such able colloquists and instructors.

ek, eek, yuk, eko, one, a, an, another, cach, whence may spring ego, ich, I, je or number one, the nearest and dearest to the first person, as two is to thou, too, tu, the second, v. s and d.
ek ek cach, individually, severally, which shows a relationship to ilk, ilka, of the scottish dialect, whilk being in fact what one. to eke may be the same word to add, join, and ace with c hard, is the identical ek required. I suspect that the vowel e, ee, of this numeral points out k as a or the being, man, person, thing, definitely or indefinitely, as this may be necessary, unity alone being often now the grand object of these articles, which was the primary view of this subject at least.

kur hand, indicates man, as well as soul on board ship, where it is still more correct to say all hands perished, than that every soul was lost, because hands or man are mortal, but "souls," according to scripture and Cato's noble soliloquy, “ shall never die.” man-us hand, is the very hinduwee man-us, or man-cos man, which in english has been curtailed, or vice versa, mun mind, soul has been elongated to man, join cos with body, for an expressed or understood living thing, without a soul, cannot as such exist. k, m, n, l, r, h, all are more or less applicable, variously modified as significant substitutes for man, pue foot, pue-k foot-man, messenger. kuwa, kaga, for ka ka crow, so called from the common cry of this bird.

khu the phlegm expulsive letter or scottish guttural in loch &c. in which h is a subser-vient entirely and never aspirated as in khu. khan lord, reader, is neither khan, a mine, nor kan the ear.

the evident relation between domus and domi-nus appears here also, as khan-u means house in persian. kho, khoo disposition, nature. khah, khayah choose, chooser, wisher, either, or. v. chu. khayah mu khayah nolens volens.

gu ghu of gaghim and not less homogeneous with k, kh, than the labials ba and pu are with each other, also as liable to transmuta-tion with ju, as ku is with su in soon-na to hear, from kun-na to ear, with a slight change of the short vowel in these words, and of the long a in kan the ear.

ga, ge, gee, geen, giyan, the sign of all futures in the hindoostanee, as affixes to the aorist, connected of course with ja go, in common with the latin tenses in bo, unless ga be chah will, wish, in a disguised form. i-bo may be ire volo I will or wish to go, contracted and varied in the labial vo to bo, ja,oon-ga on the same principle is deducible from jana and chahna, especially as the persian future is khvāhum ruft I choose, will, wish to go, and khvāh choose, or, vcl, from velle. ga,e cow, gah, guh time, place whence the elongation jaguh, juguh stead, lieu.

ag, agin fire, ign-is.

ghu the northumberland burr or gargling guttural transmutable to yu and connected with gu, ghu exactly as kh is with k, kh, and to be learned from the large bull frogs, if not the crows of india, which the persians name ghoorab, sometimes calling ships by that appellation, whence the farfamed bombay grab.
 v. k.

qu closes these gutturals; all more or less interchangeable, but we must not consider it their cue, though the tail of the whole alphabet, being merely k pronounced by slowly raising the root of the tongue, towards the back part of the palate or throat, which is kept perfectly passive and unruffled to produce the deep lingual sound required, and not brought into action as in khu, ghu, these being real rough gutturals, while qu is on the contrary a smooth liquid, having the peculiar property of creating a nausea that by frequent repetition might excite que- vomiting. this letter will be readily uttered in words such as uql wisdom, burq lightning, mushq practice, isqeel squill, which we have converted to skwill, though q in fact has no such inherent yoo or w whatever, as we generally have assigned it in our language. aqqa master is also agha, whence the simple aga of the janisaries.

25. every postposition, expressed or understood, requires the second state of the declinable noun to which it becomes a species of affix, like our own 's, with an inflective power however that this does not possess, any more than the prepositions of, to, for, in their application to english nouns only.

26. the pronouns I, thou, he, belong to the first state, and are thrown into the second by any preposition thus, of me, to thee, for him, her, their adjective form being my, mine, thy, thine, he's, his, her, and in hindoostanee they occur successively so, muen, tuen, wooh, moojh, toojh, oos, me-ra, te-ra, oos-ka, the a of the three last becoming e, ee, according to circumstances, whence ka, ke, kee constitutes the adjective form of all other words in the language, ap sometimes excepted, which has na, ne, nee, as well as ap-ka, ke, kee.

27. all the simple postpositions will be found in the subsequent pages allotted to them and the numerous compounds; the former are the exact counterparts of our own of, to, for, &c. the latter of be-low, be-side, with-in, with-out, to-ward's, instead of, on account of, according to, &c. q. v. in the complete list, with a rational theory of those eccentric parts of speech.

28. viewed as masculine nouns or verbs originally, their elliptical nature, as compound postpositions, requires, that ke, re or ne should intervene by way of affix to words governed, or as a prefix to their selves, but when they are recognizable for feminine nouns, used postpositionally kee, rec, nee are the natural interfixes. gole ke age (men) before the ball, ball's front in, gole kee turuf (ko) ball to-ward's, gole kee juguh

(men) ball's stead in, instead of the ball, moree turuf towards me, upnee jugih self's stead, toomharee khatir (ko) for, your heart for, for your sake. humaree turuh after us, in our way, like us.

29. when re, ree, ne, nee intervene, ke, kee are inadmissible pleonasms, those being in fact the appropriate pronominal or irregular substitutes for the universal adjective sign, ka, ke, kee of all nouns and pronouns except the three already enumerated.

30. simple postpositions rarely admit of the foregoing interfixes, unless when me-re, te-re, up-ne, hum-are, toomh-are, my, thy, own, our, your, are preferred to moojh, toojh, ap, &c. me, thee, self, which is often the case, and the ke kee is equally liable to omission, without the smallest injury to the sense of gole age before the ball, the most elliptical mode of expressing gole ke age men balls front in, or any other example; of the same kind.

31. the compound postpositions which exact the attendance of ke, &c. in the hiudoostanee, as persian prepositions assume i, e, bumoojibi hokm according to orders, and like the instance now given, those may be composed of persi-arabic prepositions combined, as only one hiudoostanee compound, hokm ke bu moojib agreeably to command. or according to 21, bu moojib hookm ke, is a very common deviation from the usual plan, especially in the higher style of literary composition or a grave oral discourse.

32. a considerable number of persi-arabic prepositions are admissible as such in the hindoostanee and among the rest i, e, o, which express of completely, while ka, ke, kee, rather represent the apostrophe, genitive, possessive or adjective form 's almost universally.

33. the first state of the noun corresponds with the common idea of nominative, but the second state likewise may be styled, from the nature of its accompanying postposition, nominative, subjective, genitive, possessive, dative, communicative, passive, accusative, objective, vocative, ablative, social, causal, instrumental, operative, locative, temporal, &c. whenever such logical definitions become indispensable, instead of the 1st, 2d state and adjective form only, which I have assigned to both nouns and pronouns, thus reduced to the capacity of every scholar, who is at all versed in the very first principles of his mother tongue.

34. nouns, pronouns, and adjectives belong to the first or second class, and are thus discriminated: masculines subject to any change in the singular come under the former, and all the rest having no such inflections, to the latter, either originally or as exceptions from the first class, some of them in fact appertaining to both.

35. masculines terminating in a, aṇ, u, convert these signs of the first state to e, or eṇ, in the second state singular, and first plural, but to oṇ in the second state of this last number, unless when adjectives, as in that event e, eṇ, alone suffices, except when they are introduced substantively, as the great, good, wicked, hungry, &c. then they assume pl. oṇ of course.

36. the pronouns in general, whatever their first states singular and plural may be, exhibit s as the prominent feature of the second state singular, which in the plural changes to n or nh, and to these plural terminations of the second state, oṇ is superadded at pleasure, especially when real plurality and substantive pronouns are implied, contrasted with plurals by courtesy, and pronominal adjectives, to which last the oṇ would rather prove superfluous. o, ee any, gives kisee, kiso, singular and kiuhoo plural, kya what? formerly kuha, has its second state in kahe, to which and the former by adding ka, ke, kee, we make their adjective form.

37. muen I, tuen, too thou in their second state are subjected to a peculiar modification, having the final in jh, mcojh me, toojh thee, while their adjective form is, instead of mcojh-ka, toojh-ka, me-ra, -re-ree, my, mine, te-ra-re-ree, thy, thine. in the first and second state, hum we, us, toomh ye, you, for their adjective form assume ara, are, aree, as a euphonous elongation in hum-ara our, toomhara your, never hum-ka, toom-ka. on may be affixed to hum and toomh agreeably to 36.

38. ap self, worship, honour, master, &c. used reflectively, changes in the second state singular to up-ne self, having ap-us and up-non selves in the plural. the adjective form is up-na, -ne, -nee own, applicable to most of the pronouns as their natural consecutive, my own, &c. one's own, inclusive, conformably to the particular word which precedes the up-na, -ne, -nee, in question, instead of up-ka not admissable here, though as a substantive of the second class ap-ka, ke, kee, your worship's, are frequently employed.

39. every noun not included within the first class by 34, 35, 36, 37, and 38, falls of course under the second class, and the masculines have no variation whatever in the singular and first state plural, for which feminines in ee only assume an, but all the rest en, and for the second state plural, the whole, without a single exception, affix on to the word's final letter, on the principle of addition, the grand characteristic of the second class; that of the first being in this respect substitution.

40. certain nouns, such as raja prince, chucha uncle, are common to both classes; ap as a noun likewise comes under the second, and when the pronouns possess a double second state plural in on by addition, so far are they also within the limits of the second class. a few feminine vocables in uh may be said to have their singulars in the first class, and their plurals in the second, while others moreover appear with persi-arabic plurals occasionally in preference to the regular hindoostance form, for that number.

41. nouns of this description may consequently have two or three different plurals, and sometimes even the hindoostance sign of plurality redundantly, as in seraphims, cherubims, on the other hand persi-arabic plurals may be treated occasionally as singulars only.

42. independent of the first and second state of hindoostance nouns, they all admit of a regular adjective form by affixing the common particle for this purpose, viz. ka, ke, kee, to their second state, if declinable enough to possess a visible one, and from this universal rule there are only three exceptions, which are comprehended in the 1st and 2d personals with ra, re, rec, and their reflective in na, ne, nee, detailed under 37, 38 ; were ka, ke, kee, therefore, substituted for or superadded to those irregular particles ra and na, the substitution would militate against rule, and the addition moreover prove a useless pleonasm.

43. the particles of similitude, quantity, manner, and augmentation sa, se, see, soṇ are most useful affixes, not unlike, in some respects, the ka, ke, kee. the ordinal signs aṇ, eṇ, eeṇ, assumed by the cardinals, constitute these numerical adjectives, which generally however prefer waṇ, weṇ, weeṇ, and in this are followed by a small portion of other adjectives, such as bueth-waṇ low, phisul-waṇ slippery.

44. all words, including those parts of verbs which, when this letter is not radical, end in a, have their plurals in e, and, if participles, oṇ for the second state plural, -ee for the feminine singular, with eeṇ, or ee,aṇ, iyaṇ, plural in compliance with 39. the adjective affix la, le, lee, and the verbal mark of present time ta, te, tee, teeṇ, tee,aṇ and of futurity ga, ge, gee, geeṇ, giyaṇ may therefore be here acquired as congenials so far with the ka, ke, kee, ra, re, rce, na, ne, nee, sa, se, see, waṇ, weṇ, weeṇ, especially as every infinitive may become both a declinable gerund and verbal adjective, almost ad libitum, with its inflectible na, ne, nee, neen, niyaṇ. to say nothing of puh-la, le, lee first, doos-ra, re, ree second, chuo!h-aṇ, eṇ, een fourth, and panch-waṇ, weṇ, ween fifth.

45. the first state frequently assumes in reality or appearance the place of the second and vice-versa, but the true objective or accusative commonly requires its peculiar atlixes ko, e, eṇ, then no more convertible into english, than the subjective affix ne, though easily translated by to, for, as donative or influential postpositions only.

46. when the persi-arabic degrees of comparison are not introduced, the hindoostanee comparative is formed by merely placing se than, between the noun and adjective, or to this last prefixing uor more, ziyadu much, &c. while the superlative requires sub se or men se than all, among all, before the positive, which can also be made superlative by prefixing buhoot, buṛa very, great, most, nipu!, nihayut, bu shiddut extreme, excessive.

46. bih, bih-tur, bih-tureen good, better, best, shows the persian mode and the original model of the bet good, which the english has lost in the positive form, though retained in the comparative, bet-ter and transposed in the superlative from bet-est to best. the sunskrit muha, -tur, -tun, great, -er, -est, is nearly on the same principle, but the arabic is modified by the transposition and change of letters peculiar to itself, thus fazil doctus, ufzul doctior, fuzzal doctissimus, huqeer, uhqur, huqqar, mean, -er, -est.

47. though in general both the definite and indefinite articles, as in latin, are inherent in hindoostanee nouns, the first is often emphatically denoted by the pronouns yih this, wooh that, equivalent to this here, that there, it here, it there, of which our own the and it are mere elliptical representatives. ee and hee implying identity, same, self, very, often appear peculiarly definite affixes ; while on the contrary ek one, a, an, ko, ee any, some one, like the english, are indefinite prefixes, but by no means so essential either as they are, or the arabic ul the is in ul-qooran the koran. the persian affix e, ee, indicates both a and the, rather as a particle defining number one, than expressive of any other circumstance.

48. the adjective persian form depends on the interfix i, e, or the arabic co instead of the ka, ke, kce, &c. but these occur without any apparent meaning, when the position of noun and adjective is only transposed, nek murd, murdi nek, being no more than a good man, reversed a man good. something analogous to-goree lurkiyaṇ, lurkiyaṇ goriyaṇ fair girls, girls fair, where transposition alone seems to confer the power of farther inflection upon adjectives, than what they possess in their natural state of precedence with the noun, though this be probably a poetic, instead of a prose licence in cases of this anomalous kind.

50. the simple postpositions which require the second state of every inflectible word are as follows :—

ne, from its use may be termed the subjective or nominative postposition, because although it affects all declinables but muen I, tuen thou, by throwing them into the second state, their meaning, as the subject of the active preterite verb, to which alone ne can be a prefix, is not in the least altered, by the anomalous appearance of the construction, when compared with other tongues. whatever signification ne may intrinsically possess, a version of it in english is peculiarly difficult, unless we assume the preposterous and exploded notion of some profound orientalists, that this marshal ne is only a tool or instrument under the influence of a passive voice, veiled beneath an active form. as the discriminator of the subject and object in equivocal cases, ne may have come more into vogue than was absolutely necessary, and has thus verified the common observations, that the best of things are frequently made bad by their abuse, and too much of a good thing is good for nothing. I cannot help suspecting ne to have been in reality an emphatic in former days, from its evident affinity with na to, do, at present, and like our do love, did say, might then have been used for the same energetic purposes, but which, in process of time, lapsed into the existing restriction to the genuine past tenses of transitives entirely, from some idea perhaps, that emphasis and action are more congenial with each other, than mere passion or even intransitive exertions.

ka, ke, kee, has indubitable claims as a genitive, possessive, adjective postposition or affix, retaining nevertheless all the rights of retrospective government belonging to the former, and the prospective concord peculiar to the latter, which is the cause of ka, appearing in its three forms, as we never can tell à priori the one required. I am not aware of a parallel example in any other ancient or modern tongue, unless something of this kind may yet be elicited from the latin su-us,-a,-um, cuj-us,-a, -um, as there certainly seems here an inflection of se, quis, which is not to be accounted for on any other principle. be this as it may, the most appropriate substitute for ka, ke, kee, are similar postpositions of our own, namely 's, s, se, r, and the preposition of, though this is by no means so convenient as the former in ga,o ka cow's, cos-ka his, kis-ka whose? con-ka their.

ra, re, rec, na, ne, nee, may in some measure be deemed restricted postpositions also, because the former changes muen I, tuen thou, to me-ra, te-ra, of me, my, mine, of thee, thy, thine, and hum we, toomh you, to huma-ra, toomha-ra, of us, our, ours, of you, your, yours, while the latter converts ap self, to up-na of, self, own. to these in one respect might be subjoined sa, se, sec, in mcojh-sa like me, toojh-sa like thee, could such an adjective particle be easily classed with post or pre-positions, according to our notions of grammar, guided not so much by the mere station of these particles, as by their intrinsic meaning, worth, and use.

ko, koo, koon, kuue, to, for, at, in, of, and frequently the simple objective or accusative sign, consequently untranslatable in english in that case, as we never say, like the hindoostanees, that a man beat to his wife, instead of beat his wife, though it might be said he gave a good beating to his wife with less impropriety. the only persian postposition, if i, e, be not one, ra resembles ko in meaning and position, but can hardly be considered of great use in the hindoostanee, o-ra him, to him, &c.

e, en, limited as they are to the pronouns, singular and plural, are quite synonymous with ko, and in effect nearly the same, mcojh-e, toojh-e, to me, me, to thee, thee, hum-en to us, us, toonh-en to you, you. both the ko and e, en being like the subjective ne, apparently expletives only, cannot be as accusatives signs, rendered into english.

re, rec, vocative singular postpositions, masculine, and feminine.

o the plural postposition, substituted in the first class of nouns, and added in the second for their terminations a, u, gol-o o balls, yar-o o friends! these vocative particles are nevertheless, as in most languages, prepositional and appear only modifications of the imperatives a, a-o come! hu, ho, ho-o, be! thus e, ue, o, a, he, ya, ure, urce, all signify our vocative o! ya is either a pre- or post-position, but a is commonly the latter.

pur, pu, on, at, by, over, after; but as the prefix of a sentence pur denotes but, yet, still, more-over.

men in, on, at, after, within, among, into, with, during.

se, son, sitee, te, from, by, with, of, to, at, than. se formerly having been te, demonstrates, among other proofs, the consecutive affinity between the dental and sibilant, leaving the more striking example of tuon, to, becoming so out of sight entirely.

hokur through, by. the whole of the foregoing postpositions are termed simple, from their governing the second state of the noun only, seldom or never requiring either its adjective, inflected or feminine form. pur se from on, men se from in, pur ko upon, &c. may now and then be used as our own combinations of this sort, especially among the compounds from within, form below, which are all enumerated in the next page, and like our own words of this class can form innumerable associations in that way. from above, from before, hitherto, whence, thence, with various adverbial expressions that do not strictly speaking belong to this place.

51. several genuine persi-arabic prepositions are incorporated as such in the hindoostanee, commonly with words from the source most congenial with themselves.

i, e, of, sur i murd the head of a man, moo, e sur a hair of the head, often without any perceptible acceptance whatever, murd i nek, nek murd a good man, merely denoting the transposition of noun and adjective.

oo of generally as col, oos, ood, on arabic grammatical principles, inadmissible in this place.

fee, fi, in, into, among, to, of, with, for, by, concerning, per, a, as above before l, s, d, &c.

bi in, by, with, for, on account of.

be without. this for the most part inflects the noun to which it is prefixed, be kuhe without orders, be hila,e without moving, but is more frequently used as a negative or privative prefix, like un, dis.

ta till, to, up, as far as, this ta, our to, and the hindoostanee nasalized tu-ecñ of the next division, look so much like verbal relatives, as to make me deem the whole chips of the old block, de, da, give, hand, or such roots.

the prepositions just enumerated, when adopted into the hindoostanee, retain some one or other of their numerous significations, often in pure arabic sentences and phrases, similar to our pro bono publico, ne plus ultra, and such expressions, from the latin or any foreign tongue.

52. this subsequent class of compound postpositions may be justly so called, not only from the manner of their own composition, even with us, but from their governing, instead of the mere second state, the adjective form of every word that they follow, though the intermediate

ke, kee, is not only apt to be dropt, but the only compound which requires it comes into the preposterous situation of pre-position, while ke must be post- of course, exhibiting the extraordinary figure of a noun, like the devil, not on two sticks, but fairly between them, especially in the higher style of composition or studied discourse.

tuecṇ, kune, to, for, with, near, or insignificant objective signs only, and the first even assumes ko, as a complete supernumerary in gole ke tuecṇ ko mara he struck the ball; an abuse which is almost obsolete, v. ta, described among the prepositions. kune seldom now occurs, and is rather used as a simple than a compound postposition, being probably more a kin to ko, koonṇ, kur, than to kan ear, kuna side, kona corner.

pas near, to, with, nigh to, about, at, by, beside; it originally must have signified ward, side, watch, pas-ban warder, watch-man, and may not, as a derivative, be very remote from pa foot, paw, uz-pa on foot, new modelled to pa: which by inversion, is almost as near to pas as the elliptical be-side, is to by the side, viz. near, one example of many to prove the compound nature of all such prepositions with us, although in hindoostanee they assume the station of

yuh-aṇ, wuh-aṇ, chez, at, 's, with, about, on, near, by, literally this place, house, &c. here, that place, country, &c. there. and ko, men, pur, are either expressed, but oftener understood, which satisfactorily accounts for the ke, re, ne, that precede yuh-aṇ when introduced postpositionally.

nuzdeek, qureeb, kinare, nere, or, lugbḥug, nuzd, near, by, beside, close to, nigh hand, hard by, with, aside, from kinaru, nera, or, lug, meaning side, edge, border, close, and nuzd being resolvable into nu-uz-door not at a distance. as adverbs they are occasionally almost, nearly, &c.

oopur, zubur, bala, ulawu, siwa,e, wura,e, above, upon, up, besides, over and above, to boot, v. bina. some of these more applicable as adverbs, and as complex as a-bove, on boven, uz-bur by conversion zubur, and pur koo thus may give oo-pur up-on.

neeche, tule, zer, be-low, be-neath, under, down, as the most of the postpositions are adverbs also, I have added that acceptation after the other, when our own prepositions do not convey both senses. neecha a hollow, down, tula bottom, sole. whence, gole ke neche (men) be- (by) low a ball, literally in a ball's bottom: a remark perfectly applicable mutatis mutandis, to the whole series, which terminate with e, as the second state singular of words in the first class, also participles present and past.

un-dur, bheetur, in, within, at home, in doors, dur meaning door. un sounds so like in, that the compound may belong to both oriental and occidental dialects, as our own under below implies also interior, within, inner, when we talk of under lock and key, under petticoat, under plot, a plot within a plot. bheet a wall, dur in, or the consecutive ur after bheet, naturally enough give the idea of being enclosed and within a house, limits, bounds, &c.

bahur, beroon, out, without, abroad. the analysis of this word is not so conspicuous as the scottish butt and ben, or the foregoing undur, bheetur, it may have a latent connection with par over, that side, the privative be, the numerical ba two, wa open, or ba, o air, but which, if even any of them, time will certainly tell.

sath, sung, sumet, soodhan, hum-rah, shamil, sathee, sath, bu mui, bahum, with, together, along with, in company with. su-hath at hand, su-ung, with body, soodh-an straight place, hum-rah, sum-et, same way, &c. authorise the deduction of sath, sung, company, at least, whence sathee, sungee, companion, associate.

hath, huwale, to, with, overto, into, hand, particularly with verbs of selling, consigning, delivering over, and so on. hath pur at hand. hathee, hustuk, denotes the elephant as a docile handy animal, from hath, hust, dust, which all mean hand, and this leads us by a fair induction through peel, feel, from pael, pael, sure-footed, firm-pawed, to ul-feel, the arabic progenitor of elephants, because it is probable that hands and feet at first were indiscriminately termed paws, nay we may yet trace the verbs to paw, pawn, pay, pa-na to get, find, and the noun a pawn or footman at chess, to the pa, pae, pue, pes, pedis, poo, pee, pood, peed, strangely disguised indeed under the cloven foot or feet of etymological witchcraft.

peeche, buud, bad, buud-uz, pus, wa-pus, after, behind, astern, back, also more or less connected with pue, puer, a foot, &c. pue-kar pedlar,

pure, co-dhur, cos-turuf, cos-par, cos-or, cos-siint, cos-bughul, cos-janib, &c. beyond, on that side, across, hither. v. side.

wure, i-dhur, is-turuf, is-par, war, &c. on this side, hither, hitherward.

aspas, chuogird, charon turuf, gird, gird pesh, charon or, around, about, on four sides.

bur-uks, bil-uks, bur-khilaf, zidd, oolte, mookhalif, on the contrary, in opposition to, contrasted with, in spite of.

bina, bin, bu-ghuer, ghuer-uz, bu-jooz, jooz, chhor, bidoon, chhoot, without, except, besides, v. oopur.

beech, beech-men, dur-miyan, mud, mabuen, amid, among, between, betwixt, in. the initial bu has probably some faint connection with two, resembling our twoeen, tween.

waste, moojib, subub, liye, baiis, mare, laluch, karun, for, on account of, from, through, by, in consequence of.

iwuz, budul, sunte, budle, bu-munzili, instead of, for, in lieu of.

burabur, moowafiq, qabil, bu moojib, miṣal, miṣl, manind or manund, sureeke, like, according to, in compliance with. v. below.

laiq, mconasib, suza-war, worthy of, proper for, deserving of. v. above.

huqq, huqq meṇ, in regard to, respecting, on behalf of, as far as concerns, in respect to.

war par, through and through, right over, quite across.

wuseele, mare, means, medium, through, by.
v. waste.

are across. the persi-arabic words here introduced, postpositionally, are also apt to assume the i, e, when the construction is different from the hindoo-stanee insertion of ke, whence nizdi, zeri, bala, e, peshi, &c. in persian sentences instead of nizd, and so forth.

53. the compound feminine postpositions, being moreover nouns of that gender, the prefixes to them, or affixes to the word governed, necessarily become kee, ree, nee, by the ordinary rules of construction.

manund, manind, like, after, agreeably to.

whoever can analyze our to-ward's by-to side of, instead of ball, by-ball's place in, will at once reconcile gole kee turuf (ko), to-ward's the ball, gole kee jugih (men) ball's stead in, with the common sense of the thing, after what has been already stated respecting that part of hindoostanee grammar, which makes ka govern retrospectively and agree prospectively, as in these examples, kee throws gola into the second state gole, while at the same time it is neither ka nor ke any longer, being now in concord with two feminines. the ko and men may be either expressed or understood, without altering the meaning in the smallest degree; an observation which holds good over all the compound postpositions, and thus readily accounts for the finale, wherever this is found among them; gole se toomhara kya wastu hue? what concern have you with the ball? gole ke waste (ko) aya hoon. I have come for (on account of) the ball, is such an illustration alone as will speak volumes on the theme of masculine compounds, when contrasted with feminines, gole kee khatir (ko) for the ball, ball's sake for, in which the ko is generally subauditur, and the kee a complete janus looking backwards for its object of government gole, and forwards to its subject of concord khatir ; on the very same principle, that ke was regulated by waste above, and kept like it in the masculine final e, both being under the jurisdiction of the visible or invisible ko. in every instance of this sort, and where ever this e occurs, if not otherwise to be accounted for, it will be found owing to this latent cause now discussed.

manund has been inserted under the masculine and feminine postpositions, having now become common in consequence of the following anecdote, which is much of a piece with the curious episode in the story-teller, relative to the grand subjective particle or expletive ne, formerly noticed, on which a recent innovation has been attempted, by less skilful hands, and on still more visionary grounds than this kee to manund.

until the reformed mode of exhibiting the hindoostanee in the persian character was adopted at the college of calcutta, it was frequently impossible to decide whether any particular word was masculine or feminine, singular or plural ; whence much altercation arose about the explication of sentences, thus rendered very ambiguous in their best authors.

our poets and learned men, on their first arrival there, found the new arrangement so very hostile to all laxity of grammar and style, that even they were occasionally caught tripping, where it would have been otherwise impossible to detect them. a curious instance of this sort, which then occurred, may be worth relation in this place, because it elucidates the native character most admirably, and may consequently establish an anomaly in the hindoostanee, which must ultimately be admitted as a rule, and followed of course by future grammarians. many words, as nouns, adjectives and verbs, have the appearance in this tongue of postpositions, and generally require either the inflected masculine postpositions, or affixes ke, re, ne, or their feminine forms kee, rec, nee. all adjectives, masculine nouns, and simple postpositions or adverbials, used as compound postpositions, require the masculine inflection ke. murd ke age, before the man; murd ke nuzdeck, near the man. feminine nouns, on the contrary, though used postpositionally, almost invariably require the feminine adjective sign kee, murd kee turuh, like a man; murd kee turuf, towards a man. by some mishap or other, one of our best versifiers, on his arrival in calcutta, wrote kee, I presume inadvertently, for ke before manund, like, introduced as a postposition. I objected to the possibility of manund ever being met with as a noun, and asserted, that it could not therefore either be of the feminine gender, nor in my opinion did it ever govern the feminine form. my learned friend persisted in his assertion, and had moreover the address to persuade those hindoostanees, whom I would consult, that he, as a poet and native of hindoo-stan must be right, and I, as a foreigner, must necessarily be wrong. I appealed to the best classic authors in support of my rules, but alas! they never had yet discriminated in persian writing ke, kee, or even kue, from each other : the point in dispute was therefore left as much undetermined as ever, by a reference, which under other orthoepigraphical circumstances ought to have decided the matter at once. from every oral experiment I have made with people not under the influence of, nor previously instructed by, my learned friend to introduce kee manund, I have constantly heard them say ke manund and still adhere to my original belief, although in this and other works, for very obvious reasons, the kee with manund may still stare the reader in the face. it is even possible enough, that proof of kee being right may be yet brought from the rudeef or rhyming chine of a poem ending in ee ; but even this can have no farther weight with me, than the acknowledged license of poets, with respect to metre and grammar in every language, ought to have with judicious grammarians, for we all know, that sense and reason are sacrificed on a pinch, to sound and rhyme, by the bards of every age and clime, and by none perhaps more frequently than by those of hindoostan. let me, on this occasion, invite every friend to rational enquiry and the investigation of truth, to discover, if possible, whether my opponent or I be wrong, and however mortifying to my pride as an author, let me beseech the candid investigator to favour me with the result, that I may recant or not accordingly. to prove how very injurious to real science every thing like positiveness of opinion must be, in discussions of this nature, I need only mention one curious apparent anomaly, in the postpositional department of hindoostanee grammar. the word miṣl as a noun is feminine, but used as a postposition it never governs kee. toom upnee miṣl men ja buetḥo, go and be seated in your post, i. e. with people like you. huṃ ne aj tuk os ke miṣl kisee ko nu dekḥa, I have never seen till this day a man like him.

this seeming irregularity puzzled all my people very much, and would certainly have staggered me also, had I not accounted for it immediately by adverting to the various forms of this word in arabic, both as a noun and an adjective. taking it as the latter, introduced postpositionally into the hindoostanec, ke before it is perfectly proper, and in its capacity, as a feminine noun, kee is equally regular, as illustrated above. manund seems a mere adverbial, that can have no claim to kee, on any plea or pretence whatever ; but rather than give this up, our minstrel even insisted, that the mere transposition of words in this tongue was always sufficient to alter the regimen entirely. according to him, murd kee turuf, towards the man, if so far transposed, should be turuf murd ke ; now as no language is more flexible, in the simple position of words, than the hindoostanee, it must follow, were our poet's notion just, that it in fact possesses no such thing as a grammar. this idea is in reality what the great body of the hindoostanee literati were long driving at, for no other earthly reason than their own ignorance of the existence and excellence of those rules, which they daily, as speakers and writers, put in practice, but of which they can no more give any rational detail or account, than the man in the moon. what may not the brute beasts of the field be brought to practise in the course of years ; and where is the difference between them and human beings, if the latter are unable to reason and think with propriety, upon the nature and laws of that speech, which they use as men? many may accuse me of dwelling too much upon trifles, and will probably instance this digression upon manund as one of them : but as I suspect the learned men of my department, in the calcutta college have, sometimes too successfully, misled myself, for the sake of sheltering their own mistakes, ignorance, and obstinacy, under my works, I deem it a duty which every author owes to the public to bid them be on their guard, and I have conscientiously discharged it, in this instance at least. it constantly has occurred to me, that when a native has made a blunder in any part of his vernacular tongue, he would much rather be guilty of deception, and establish a false rule in the hindooſtanee, to mislead people by it to all eternity, or swear there was no grammar in the language, than manfully declare that he had inadvertently been guilty of an error, and would avoid it carefully in future. when one interrogates them closely respecting the right and wrong way of using a word, and they have unluckily been clearly out in their conjectures about it, they generally resort to their famous salvo in all such dilemmas. hañ dono dooroost huen şahib: "true sir, both are right," and to this my poetical friend Meer sher ulee ufsos had recourse, by assuring me that "manund cos ke uor cos kee manund ek hee hue," were both one and the same thing. be it so, but as false facts, and false rules founded upon them, are not new in the history of literature, we never can be too cautious in our admission of such innovations, from which the absurd and contradictory rules of many tongues may have oftener taken their origin, than we can now conceive, without more experience in the rise, progress, and downfall of particular languages, than will ever fall to the share of an age, far less to that of one man.

during the discussion of the ke, kee, controversy, one of the most learned of the hindoo-stanee moonshees, on explaining the matter, very gravely assured the gentleman whom he attended, that there was no difficulty whatever left in the construction of such sentences, for the native hindoo-stanee scholars had agreed among themselves to use kee, whenever the noun governed by manund was feminine, and ke when masculine.

this, to be sure, may be one mode of cutting the gordian knot, but they could not have stumbled on a more preposterous method of reconciling kee manund, had they been playing at blind man's buff with their vernacular grammar, as it militates against the most essential principles of the whole, and would in truth make nothing but darkness visible there.

unimportant as the foregoing grammatical anecdote may seem to many, it might nevertheless convey a very salutary lesson, on the most serious subjects, to those worthies among our countrymen, who conceive that a native of india is as much entitled to belief, even upon oath, as any other british subject, of the same rank in life, can possibly be.

from my own experience, I feel no compunction in affirming, that the very best of the hindoostanees, whom I have yet seen, would seldom hesitate to assert, the grossest falsehoods, provided these could establish and support any favourite object in the religion, law, languages, or manners of the people, from which, generally or individually, they could gain any advantage over us or each other.

it requires very little penetration to perceive how the great body of the people in british india, under such circumstances of general depravity and collusion, have been hitherto exposed to the shameless, mercenary, and unprincipled spirit of the rich and learned natives, who might thus have combined more or less to expound laws and translate papers as they pleased, without being exposed to detection by the mass of illiterate men, who are thus too often left to the mercy of wolves and foxes, in the formal, imposing guise of a sable shepherd, whose grand object is invariably to flay, after having fleeced his flock, with adequate address and consequent impunity.

from such a state of universal spoliation, the mass of the people are now happily relieved by the victorious arms of our countrymen, who have it thus in their power, by introducing all those arts of peace, which are founded on equity, reason, truth and utility, to consolidate the happiness of millions, who formerly groaned under every species of sacerdotal, aristocratic and princely oppression, from the hands of their own countrymen.

54. the general principles of verbal inflection, in every sense of the word, are so consistent and uniform, that the following prospectus has been contrived, of such universal application, as to convey at one glance a competent idea of the whole, which will reduce the subsequent conjugation of verbs, almost within a nutshell. kur, the particle or affix denoting the pluperfect participle being that alone which now can appear strange there to the hindoostanee scholar, who has mastered the contents of the preceding sheets, and this very kur, in the common modification of it to the participial ke, reconciles conjugation in its minutest branches, with every part of declension previously learnt by the student.

on separate leaves, between pages 98 and 99. having both given an abstract or bird's eye view of etymology, and a complete table of declension in this language, for the benefit of the general grammarian, in his rapid flight through this region of oriental philology, we shall afterwards proceed to a similar sketch of the only conjugation to be found in the hindoostanee tongue.

the auxiliary verb ho-na to be, has been sufficiently discussed among the significant particles, to make even it consistent with the universal conjugation from which there is not one exception : we may therefore observe, once for all, that na, to, being dropt, the root of the verb remains, which is moreover always the imperative second person singular, under the various modifications of hu-hoo- or ho-na to be, as the tense in question may require.

55. there being no neuters in hindoostanee, nouns denoting males and females of course follow their natural gender only. ee, sh, t, as, ue, ya, ar, r, h, d, k, l, n, including the alphabetical letters be, &c. those ending with e or l, many names of birds and rivers, and monosyllables having medial ee or ue, with all arabic vocables commencing in t and the second last letter being ee, are feminines. a and u, with the whole of the other terminations, not stated above, exclusive of such exceptions as practice alone can teach, or a seasonable reference to the dictionary, are masculine.

56. in cases of dubiety on the score of gender, from innumerable deviations which take place, the masculine modification should be preferred to the feminine, that the error may be less conspicuous, and temporary ignorance may be also concealed (which is the next best thing to the possession of knowledge) under the more accommodating veil of masculine construction, so predominant among the illiterate natives in this language.

57. nur he, madu she, as persian discriminators are sometimes admissible. v. principle 61.

58. the tabular views inserted successively, in the subsequent pages, will at one glance of each convey a practical and very general idea of the generic formation and sexual signs, peculiar to the hindoostanee tongue.

the genus, independent of sex, is often discovered by dropping the sexual affix, thus, moorgh fowl, bird, bher sheep, hurn, mirg, deer, muchik buffalo, khuchur mule, khuchra, khuchree, bhuens, bhuensa, bhuensee, buffalo, he, and she.

this is by far the most general mode, including nearly all the substantives and adjectives in a and u, and holds good also in such magnitives and diminutives as russa rope, russee cord, gola ball, golee bullet, chooha rat, choohee mouse, huran-zadu, huran-zadee, rarely huran-zadin bastard, as few such words have in, un, &c. for ee.

sometimes chucha-nee, and the²⁴ feminine of molla is fortunately thus distinguished better from moolee raddish, as a very small number of nouns in a, take nee. mcollanee applies to any schoolmistress, likewise the sister, daughter, if old enough. see farther on, under the word buniya.

sometimes buniyance or kubitancee, applicable also to the sister, daughter, or to any female trader ; on the contrary, however, the next word kubita_{in} often requires no other qualification, than being the wife, daughter, or sister of a bard ; a circumstance that frequently occurs, from the hindoo tribes being confined to particular trades or professions, and consequently applies to many of the present examples ; but from these we must except pundita, in the next page.

kuscrin, kuserun, kuseree, with the most of such nouns in era, as ~~th~~uthera, sumpera, bhungera, which frequently have nec, in, un, or ee indiscriminately.

choube, choubain, names of bramminical tribes ; but paude has pundain, a common irregularity that can easily be accounted for and reconciled.

dhobun, sometimes dhobince ; kusbee, means either a male or female artist, though now confined to courtezans, and occasionally becomes kusbin, like most masculines in ee. moostanee, moosin, and khutra_{in}, khutrin, are at times used, also quziya_{in} from qazee. adjectives in ee are alike in both genders ; burā bharee scowur, a very large boar, burā bharec scowuree a very large sow.

this is a moosulman tribe. de, o god, demon, de, onee goddess ; and according to the hindoos, dewan-guna. there are but few such nouns in o to require much attention.

exhibits the various ways these words are formed ; hindoo_ain, hindoo_wance, also are proper : baboo master, has bubwa_ain mistress ; and from kandoo sugar-boiler, &c. come kan_odoonee, kan_odoo_ance, kundwa_ain, his wife, &c.

the feminine here is often redundant, sconarin, soonarnee, soonar_{ee}, scowurnee, scowurin, being all proper ; but it is difficult to say when such words should have in, un, nee, ee : practice and my hindoo_{st}anee and english dictionary, now preparing for the press, will however, settle this point to the reader's satisfaction. words in ar often have a_ain ; scon_aa_ain, loha_aa_ain, chuma_aa_ain, from sconar, lohar, chumar, instead of locharin, locharun, loharee, loharnee.

mihtra _{nee} , or mihtra _a in,	}	the zubar or u being dropped (as e in tigress) in uttering mooghul _{ance} , it becomes moogh _l ance, a deviation that is too trifling to stand upon here, though its frequency be worth noting. pundit _a in, pundit _{anee} , likewise occur, but pundit _a rather means a learned woman . v. na _{ek} , principle 59.

busunt the spring, prem friendship, when proper names, take iya or ee for the feminine, and kureem, suleem, uzeem, u, or un, kuree_{mun}, suleem_u, uzeem_{un}, used also as diminutives, whence we may account formeerun, mo_oradun, &c. being applicable even to men.

59. some arabic masculines become feminine by affixing u, while sunskrit words assume a, mulik king, muliku queen, shajir poet, shajiru poetess, but the distinction, as in english, is beginning to be disused, or is often neglected. when mulik signifies a camel-keeper, it has mulika_in, mulikanee for his wife or daughter. na_iek lad, swain, na_ieka lass, pachuk man-cook, pachuka woman cook, sewa juno, from sev or sew, jupiter.

60. the following vocables, which are in a manner exceptions to the other rules, are formed in this manner, and may be partly accounted for by the transposition and convertibility of letters, to which so many words in this language are subject. buhin sister, bha_iee brother. for bha_in, whence bhan-ja nephew, sister's son. rancee princess, raja prince, for rajee, from rana, though this seems rather obsolete, whatever its meaning might have been formerly. hut_incee she elephant, hat_ihee elephant, for hat_in, hat_iheenee. moomanee aunt, mamoo uncle, for mamooinee. or mamee, from mama uncle. ryancee, ra_ic rajpoot title, for ra_ineec, ra_ia_in. this also may account for rancee, above. chuku_ice wild duck, chukwa the drake, chukwee. gournya hen sparrow, guora cock sparrow, guoree. biluya she cat, billa he cat, billee. all used, and billee more so than biluya, which in the masculine has also billar and billa_o. chiriya bird, chira cock sparrow, chiree hen sparrow. rand widow, runda widower, rundee or rindee, means a woman. beg-um, khan-um lady, beg, khan lord, for begun. begum is used for women of rank, as lady is with us. kud-banoo landlady, kud-ban landlord? bunoo begum lady dowager comes from this banoo.

61. while many words are m. or f. arbitrarily such as jan life, among the annexed vocables the discrimination of sex depends on separate words, and not on the terminations at all; but where the distinction is neither obvious nor necessary, one word often expresses both sexes, or has occasionally nur he, -added for the masculine, and madu she, for the feminine gender by 57, q. v.

62. the whole of the exceptions to the general rules on gender in page 99, are too numerous for insertion or notice here ; nothing therefore, but observation, with an extensive practice in the language, and my hindoostance and english dictionary when published, can give the learner a proper idea of them, as in it every word shall be marked agreeably to the gender assigned it, by the best authors, who indeed must be the only guides in this part of the grammar, its equivocalness and intricacy being such, that few of the natives themselves, can either assist in forming the necessary rules on this subject, or observe those that are already established, and obvious enough to every body who will give them the smallest attention : what still perplexes the matter more, is the moosulmans considering many words masculine, which the hindoos insist on being feminine ; and vice versa. of the first we have an instance in jatra departure, of the second in burkha rain, &c. which are therefore inserted among the exceptions to principles, though as sunskrit words, a number of them be feminine, according to rule in that language, but not in hindoostanee, the annexed words therefore chhoodha hunger, and perhaps a few more are nearly all irregularly feminine : but panee water, ghce boiled butter, motee pearl, duhee curdled milk, jee life, are almost the only nouns in ee, whose gender depends solely on termination, which are masculine, contrary to the universal rule, with those few exceptions in the foregoing short list of them.

63. many arabic words ending with radical a, a or u are feminine, and probably the catalogue subjoined comprises the most of them, at all events, it will give a good idea of the feminines in a, considered as such here; but in arabic I believe they are frequently, if not always, treated as masculine.

and to these we may subjoin intiha end, istirza will, iltija solicitation, ishtiha appetite, istighna independence; though in general such words are, according to principle 55, masculine.

64. the imperative in the second person singular, is the root or radical portion of every verb in the hindoo-stanee, which must always be discovered by dropping na: and in general, as in our language, it is also a significant, useful noun.

65. every infinitive terminates in the common inflectible particle na, ne, nee, but here meaning to, which, like the other postpositives is invariably affixed to the second person singular of the imperative, chah-na, to love, the hindoo-stanee being in this respect of position, as in some others, diametrically opposite to ours.

67. the present tense and participle merely require the letter t, intermediately, as a temporal sign, to precede the several particles just enumerated as past signs, and which all occur here exactly under similar circumstances: chah-t-a, chah-t-e, chah-t-ee, chah-t-eeñ, chah-t-iyañ, love, lovest, and so on.

68. the root in the formation of the aorist, subjunctive present, or imperative, assumes for both genders the familiar affixes ooñ, e, e, singular, and eñ, o, eñ, plural, in the order of persons observed here, and this tense like the present of the indicative has often the auxiliary signs, being in fact an occasional substitute for that part of the indicative, as there seems a mutual reciprocity here, peculiarly evident in hu-ooñ, hooñ, ho-ooñ, formerly explained.

70. the pluperfect participle is either expressed by the root, or by the various particles ke, kur, kurke, kurkur, and e, all cognates of the noted ka, ke, kee, ko, and fragments from or modifications of kur the hand, promiscuously affixed to the imperative, for that most useful portion of the verb.

71. the result of the foregoing principles on the verb hu-hoo- or ho-na to be, and all others, is as follows in the scheme opposite, which the diligent student will carefully compare with the sketch already exhibited in page 112, that a real knowledge of both may at once enable him to master every hindoostanee verb, the moment it falls under his discussion, either in a sentence or the vocabulary : this can instantly be accomplished, by separating the root from na, or any other of the moveable particles, like oon, e, kur, already stated, and in this manner ho-na to be, exist, become, can at once be regularly conjugated.

72. as the particles above enumerated are applicable, in the very same manner, to all verbs whatever, and as the whole drop e in the second person sing. of the aorist to form the root, or rather the second person sing. of the imp. it naturally follows, that there is but one conjugation in the language.

73. by taking inductively for granted, what may almost be demonstrated, that kee-na, moo-na, dee-na, lee-na, are the ancient infinitives of kurna to do ; mur-na to die ; de-na to give ; je-na to take ; and also supposing that o, u, and oo, j and g, are nearly the same interchangeable letters, we shall not find one single irregular verb in the whole hindoostanee language, though those above in one respect may be termed redundant.

n. b. the inf. or gerund masc. belongs to the first, and the fem. to the second class of nouns; it is moreover a verbal adjective, ho-na, hone, honee probable. the root ho alone is used as a pluperfect participle; thus also bol, bol-kur, &c. having spoken.

74. hoon, hue, huen, ho, which by the elision of u from hu-oon and hu-o, constitute the regular aorist of hu-na, hoo-na, ho-na, though now restricted to the indicative present of the auxiliary or substantive verb only. affixed to participles present and past, they have exactly the same power and use as our am, do, have, &c. hoo,a, means is, was, or been, and occasionally appears superfluous. it is the regular perfect, from hoo-na, and the true participial affix past and present, but much oftener understood than expressed.

75. when the auxiliary signs are omitted, the mere present becomes not only indefinite, but also a past tense in the subjunctive mood. jo muenṇ lurka hota uesa nuheenṇ kurta, were I a boy I would not act so, or had I been a boy I would not have done so; jo muenṇ wuhanṇ sota kisee ko nuheenṇ jugata, had I slept there, I would not have waked any one.

76. to express the imperfect of the auxiliary hona, the word ṭha, was, did, had, is in use, and is probably a contraction from the regular perfect ṭha-a, staid, of the obsolete verb ṭha-na, to stay, be stationed, which to this day means a station, post; as kha-na, to eat, also applies to meat, dinner, food, &c.

77. from the above ṭha, and the indefinite present or participle, comes the imperfect tense muenṇ hota ṭha, I was existing, or did (then) exist; too hoo,a ṭha, thou didst exist, or hadst been. ṭha with a past participle means had, and was with a present, as hoonṇ does under those very circumstances am and have.

78. the whole of the compounds have just now been elucidated, and the simple tenses, having formerly been adjusted in page 115, they require no repetition here.

79. in the passive voice, the perfect participle of the active verb assumes jana, to go, be, affixed through its various tenses, which may nevertheless be followed by such parts of hona, as particular tenses may there require; and the only irregularity in ja-na is gūya, for jaya, which nevertheless occurs with some verbs.

80. the perfect participle passive, in all compound tenses, seems to require guya, but commonly drops it in those which are simple. muen mara guya hoon, I have been beaten; muen mara ja, oonga, I shall be beaten; lit. I have gone beaten, I shall go beaten.

81. the personal pronouns, as in latin, are not always expressed, the termination, auxiliary, or sense, generally pointing out the particular person.

when they do occur, it is commonly so :

muen, I ;	too, thou ;	wooh,	}	yih, he, she, it, this. he, she, it, that. hum, we ;	toom, you ;	we,	}	ye, they, these, they, those.

tra-distinction to that, those, for the awkward expressions this here man, that there woman.

82. the third person is often substituted for the other two, from the oriental practice of introducing words like slave for I, and worship, honour, gentleman, &c. for you. the singulars and plurals are likewise liable to great confusion from their use and abusz resting on mere courtesy or sheer arrogance. complimentary plurals may be termed de facto, and those which are bonâ fide so, plurals de jure, both of which require plural verbs and adjectives.

83. although the hindoostance verbs have often inherently potential, permissive and other properties, they nevertheless require also certain compound forms to express them, the last or subservient portion of which is always conjugated like all other verbs.

84. these compounds are formed in five different ways, and may be conveniently termed radical, preteritive, inflective, participial, and reiterative, from the nature of their composition.

85. the radical (I.) is a very extensive class, comprehending, besides numberless adverbial infinitives, the potential and completive forms.

86. under the preteritives (II.), are all the passives, desideratives, requisitives, proximatives, and frequentatives.

87. when the prefixed infinitive occurs in the inflected (III.) instead of the radical form, a considerable number of inceptive, permissive, and acquisitive verbs are produced, all highly useful in the hindiee tongue.

88. the participial (IV.) combinations are also very numerous, and may be subdivided into continuative and statistical : the first are subject to change in the participle, and the last always having e, as the sign of what has been termed in latin the ablative absolute.

89. a very few come under the reiterative (V.) class, in which the subservient part has of itself little or no very obvious meaning whatever, although certainly deducible from other significant words.

90. the result of the above enumeration, systematically considered, may be thus exhibited :

1. radicals.

1. adverbials, from their signification with us, kaṭ-ḍahna, to cut off; gir-puṛṇa, to fall down; le-jana, to take away; chaṭ-jana, to lick up, kha-jana, to eat up.
2. potentials, bol-sukna, to be able to speak.
3. completives, pce-chœkna, to be done drinking; kha-chœkna, to finish eating.

II. preteritives.

1. passives, mara-jana, to be beaten.
2. desideratives, } to wish
3. requisitives, } mura-chahna, ought } to die.
4. proximatives, } also to be about
5. frequentatives, bola-kurna, to make a habit of speaking; jaya-kurna, to have a trick of going; pyra-kurna, to practise swimming; aya-kurna, to make a practice of coming.

III. inflectives.

1. inceptives, seekhne-lugna, to begin to learn; bolne-lugna, to begin to speak.
2. permissives, jane-dena, to let, or permit to go; ane-dena, to let come.
3. acquisitives, ane-pana, to be allowed to come; jane-pana, to be allowed to go.

IV. participials.

1. continuatives, purhta-jana or-ruhna, to continue reading
2. statisticals, gate-ana, to come singing; rote-duorna, to run crying.

V. reiteratives.

1. subservients, bolna-chalna, to converse, &c. byahna-burna, to marry, with perhaps a few more.

91. the inflected infinitive at times supplants the radical form. in this way, however, muen nu chul sukta, I cannot walk, muen chulne sukta, I can-are very liable to confusion ; and as muen nuheen chulne sukta is not a very musical sentence, the ne ought to be entirely avoided.

92. the passives and continuative participials change in both their component parts, according to the gender and number of their nominatives. wooh maree gu,ee thee she was slain ; wooh rotce ruhec she continued weeping, and the reiteratives are in fact doubly conjugated, cos se muen nu kubhoo bola nu chala I never had any thing to say to him.

93. muen kuhchooka I have already said ; uesa nut bola kuro upne nuokur se do not make a habit of speaking so to your servant ; jo muen ane pa,oon toomhare yihan, to toon ko jane de,oon upne yihan if I be allowed to come to your house I will permit you to go to mine, with a few such, are well calculated to elucidate this department now. in the exercises they will again appear, but on the whole are so essential for immediate colloquial purposes, that the learner ought to lose no time in acquiring this most useful part of the language.

94. the power which transitives have of prefixing ne is lost the moment they are compounded with any neuter verb. muen ne kḥana kḥaya I have eat my dinner; muen kḥa chooka I have done eating.

95. bolna to speak; lana to bring; chookna to miss, end, &c.; lūna to fight, and a few others, though apparently transitives, nevertheless do not admit ne; tuen ne kuha thou saidst; tuen bola thou spokest; toon ne liya you took; we la,e the they had brought.

96. the addition of negatives in the hindoostanee is so very easy, that a few examples only can be requisite to illustrate the mode completely; nu is common to all the modes, mut peculiar to the imp. and nuheen to the rest; toon jante nuheen? don't you know? muen nu janta ṭha I did not know; mut poochho don't ask; nu janiyo don't suppose.

97. the learner must be careful not to confound emphatic interrogatives and affirmatives with negative expressions; muen ne bḥeja hue I have sent, tuen ne bḥeja thou hast sent; muen nuheen bola hoon I have not spoken; toon nuheen la,e ho you have not brought.

98. hindoostanee syntax and construction will appear so easy and simple in any dialogues or exercises hereafter presented to the scholar, as to preclude the necessity of all further observation, in a short introduction of this kind. persons versed in the analysis of a sentence in any language, can be at no loss, after a few trials, with the examples which may occur here ; and such as really wish to become masters of the hindoostanee, need not limit their enquiries to these pages, as long as any other works are in print.

99. the composition and derivation of words is equally obvious and attainable, after recollecting the contents of the alphabetical pages 9, &c. with the few particulars-inserted below, for the use of mere beginners.

100. when the infinitive is thus met with—chah-na to love, phir-na to turn, khel-na to play, dur-na to fear, little penetration can be wanted to discover the noun, as in our own tongue. should the root end in n, the scholar must recollect not to confound the infin. and perfect together, which he will at first be apt to do in ginna to count ; souna to hear ; janna to know, and some others, as their perfects are gina, souna, jana.

101. sometimes the inf. and noun are the same, as khana to eat, also food. in the fem. this occasionally denotes the instrument, as kutur-nee, a pair of scissors, from kutur-na, to clip. the perfect, or participle, is also the noun, as chooma a kiss, kuha order, advice, mara or mara hoo, a victim, &c. from choom-na to kiss, kuhna to tell, marna to beat, kill. this also as a

fem. is a noun, like boleē speech. the present part. likewise is a noun in both genders, as kḥata a waste book, receiver or granary, from kḥana to suffer, admit, manta regard, man-na to mind, &c.; bustee a village, from busna to dwell, inhabit; gintee a muster, reckoning, from ginna to count, &c.

102. adjectives require kurna to become active compound verbs; with hona they are neuter, kḥura erect, kḥura-k. to raise, kḥura-h. to rise, gurm hot, gurm-k. to heat actively, gurm-h. to heat, or grow warm. nouns are also used in a similar manner with kurna to make, kḥana to eat, suffer, receive, dena, to give. pana, milna, to get, meet, rukḥna to place, bandḥna to tie, ana to come, in such combinations as fikr-k. to think, galee-d. to abuse, galee-kḥana, to be abused, nuzur-ana to appear, or come in sight, &c. in 106.

103. in some instances these auxiliaries above are preferred to the regular passive form, whence mar-kḥana to get a beating; or mara-jana to be beaten, have often the same meaning.

104. the neuters and actives are in general so well distinguished in this language from each other, that the learner can seldom confound them, as in our tongue, together. the transitive forms generally spring from the neuter or intransitive by assuming a before na, or by prolonging the short vowel of the neuter, in the active infinitive, for the causals wa commonly suffices before na; julna, julana, julwana, to burn, to cause burn; kḥcolna, kḥolna, kḥcolwana, to open, cause open, &c.

105. the scholar should always recollect, that in this way he may discover a number of very useful verbs by a slight attention to the connection between one and the other form; chulna to go, chulana to drive, sonna to hear, sonna to tell, buchna to escape, buchana to save, seekḥna to learn, sikḥana to teach, murna to die, marna to kill, bḥcolna to forget, bḥcolana to mislead, are a convincing proof of the truth of my remarks and assertions, which, as the scholar proceeds in his career, he will find more and more worthy of his assiduous observation.

106. from the foregoing hints, the learner may almost at pleasure furnish his self with many verbs apparently not inserted in this work, agreeably to the same principles in his own tongue, evident in the examples—to make haste, to take care, to give vent, to tie fast, to get a beating; but for ample information on this portion of the hindooostanee, he must attend to the exercises and vocabulary, and in the mean time, recollect that the above auxiliaries will there be contracted to k. kh. h. d. p. m. a. r. b. d. &c. kam-a. to be of use, qusm-kh. to swear.

107. many neuters, like mur-na to die, ḍoobna to sink, are conjugated with jana, which is properly the passive affix ; whence mur-jata dies, mur-guya died, ḍoob-ja,ega will sink, instead of mur-ta, mura, ḍoobega, the simple forms. the masculine plural of the perfect tense of all verbs, (hona, lena, dena, excepted), can be discriminated from the second and third person singular of the aorist by the context only, especially when the euphonic w, peculiar to it, is omitted ; and the verbs jeet-na to win, jee-na to live, jan-na to know, ja-na to go, ga-na to sing, are respectively subject to misconception in some of their tenses : thus, jee-ta lives, jeet-a won, jana knew, jana to go, guya went, gaya sung.

108. a summary of the whole verbal principles will now be conspicuous enough in the following tables, which comprise the form of every intransitive and transitive verb in the language, with the entire passive voice of every active verb, comprehended in one conjugation, from which there is hardly a single exception or irregular in the hindoostanee, though such redundances as kura, kiya, did, made, done, ho,a, hoo,a, been, &c., mura, moo,a, died, dead, guya, jaya, went, gone, le,a, liya taken, took, de,a, diya, gave, given, may be met with, as also a long string of others, whenever the euphonic

elision of a vowel or the insertion of the equivocal w, y, occurs upon certain maxims, which have been so sedulously inculcated in various places of this work, as to render these literal deviations, in any portion of hindoostanee etymology, unimportant, easy, and evident to every learner, who can throw into the scale, with his own even moderate talents, a very few scruples of progressive attention to my principles.

109. when the verb is transitive, all the real perfect tenses may often remain wholly uninflected, while their pronouns, on the contrary, will be thrown by ne into the inflexion, as far as they can, or the usage of the hindoostanee will permit thus :

muen	}	ne mara hue,	}	I, thou, he, &c. beat, or have beaten.	}	ne mara hoga,	}	I, thou, he, &c. may have beaten.	}	ne mara tha,	}	I, he, &c. had beaten, did beat, or simply beat.

110. the pluperfect participles ho-kur, bol-kur, bol-ke, &c. having been or spoken, have appeared in detail, and merit every attention from the learner, not only as the participle which joins two or more members of a sentence, by suspending the meaning, till it closes, but also as a convenient adverbial form of the greatest use in the language, in such expression,—şahib ke

it is time to remark on the verbal paradigm above, that the present and perfect participle, strictly speaking, are discriminated by hoo-a affixed; this however is so often omitted as to confound the two parts of the verbs together, but the context commonly prevents misconception. hoo-a (for hu-a or ho-a) the perfect of ho-na, to be, has been already noticed, and sufficiently accounted for. bol, bol-kur, bol-ke, bol-kurkur, bole, all denote having spoken.

yihan jakur, humara sulam kuhke, coskee topee mangke, cose lekur, phir a,o having gone to the gentleman's, given my compliments, and having borrowed his hat, return with it here. whatever you do, act deliberately, jo koochh ki toom kuro, so soch-ke kuro, from sochna to think, duor-ke ja,o go quickly, i. e. having run.

111. the future of the infinitive and participle generally occurs so, bola-chahna to be about to speak, bolne-pur, bolne-wala about to speak, but such combinations can give little or no trouble, and any scholar, who has really studied the foregoing principles cannot well forget, that a, for the fem. sing. becomes ee, and that ee in the fem. plural must be een or iyan, as exhibited in page 115; he must moreover recollect, that e of the aorist 2d person in the imperative singular is always dropt; whence, bol too speak thou, ugur too bole, if thou speak.

112. no transitive verb can now prove difficult in the active, we shall therefore fully exhibit the passive, on page 131, from which the learner will acquire the whole of the verb jana, to go, or to be, in this voice, as the passive auxiliary with hona, which is not only common to both, but a constant subservient of neuters, some of which will be found in page 126, principle 107.

113. the w may be omitted or inserted at pleasure in all verbs whose root ends in a vowel. they even occasionally drop the e and o also, whence ho,o, howe, ho,e, ho ; howeṇ, ho,eṇ, hoṇ, are all used promiscuously, and consequently ho,ooṇ, hooṇ, ho,oonga, hoonga, howega, ho,ega, hoga, in the future. this tense in the auxiliary is often pronounced huega, huenge, (with rather a present than future meaning) being formed by affixing ga, ge, to the hue, huen, of hu-na or hona, exactly as the future is upon the aorist in the preceding table.

114. to reconcile do, lo, bo, and dooṇ, looṇ, with de,o, le,o, bo,o, de,oonga, le,oonga, and all contractions of this kind, from verbs like dena, lena, bona, hona, &c. by euphonic rules, must now be quite easy, and on similar principles the short vowel u, in many infinitives, is omitted in other parts of the verb, whence, sumjha, nikla, &c. in the perf. sumjhoonga, nikloonga, in the future, (never sumujha, &c.) from sumujhna to understand, nikulna to issue. this theme must prove truly conspicuous to the reflecting student who will look attentively back to the significant particles at the beginning of this work, from page 9 to 64 whence he will learn how to reconcile and account for every trifling literal deviation that can present itself, in any portion of hindoostanee etymology, not omitting the elision or insertion of the y in गया, ga,e,a, guye, gu,e, went, though rather troublesome words.

for the short vowels is peculiarly striking in the consistency of invention and philological economy of popular speech of hindoostan, which has, on the other hand, degraded to a jargon, chiefly by those whose even on their mother tongue, out of sheer delusive pedantry of collegiate tuition, whence the empty scholastic pride of venerable institutions, mischief, mystery and deceit. we may be yet led of hindoostanee verbs, in their unique conjugations, numerous irregulars in which, on the simple crepances and meanderings from the general rules, blood, bleed, bled, food, feed, fed, writ, write, fought, give, gave, sit, sat, lie, (lay,) lay, laid, exhibit to modern eyes a mighty maze though conceive, of an original, ancient plan, which is enough on this theme, to render it more systematic and those who may feel a strong desire for good, old, sterling, english tongue.

gurm-a,ega will become soft, will soften, are nearly one and the same thing; an idea which must pervade almost the whole of the verbs of this sort, and may be indulged accordingly.

many of the preceding infinitives, in their respective divisions, are redundant in their transitives and causals, dubana, dabna to squeeze, depress, choowana choolana to distill, melna milana to join, colhana colhalna to raise, coltana colatna to upset, sookhana sookhlana to dry, pitana pithalna to enter, codhana codherna to flay.

120 it has formerly been remarked, that thena of neuters very readily becomes jana, and this is preserved through every tense of those neutro-passives, distinguishable from the passive voice of active verbs, by the jana being affixed to the root, instead of the perfect participle of the leading verb, which frequently preserves it's active meaning, either unimpaird or qualified in our versions by an adverbial affix, peculiar to our mother tongue. wooh jee ko bhagnya, that pleased the heart. budlee muedan pur chhagnee a cloud lowered on the plain. wooh majura jee ko ghubra गया, that event agitated my mind. wooh pa-guya, he found out. lohoo pce गया nor kuleja khaguya, he drunk off the blood and cat up the liver. see principle 112.

121. a few infinitives, apparently neuter, are intrinsically active, nigulna to swallow. uṭkulna to guess. kuturna to clip. chṣiṛukna to sprinkle. ruguṛna to fret, pound, grind, rub. but budulna to change, and bḥurna to fill, gḥisna to fret, seem to be among the very few verbs which are in hiindoostanec both active and neuter.

on the contrary, certain active infinitives in form, at least, are also neutro-passives, ghubrana to confound, or be confounded, bḥurmana to fear or frighten, koomhlana to wither, kutrana to slink, kḥoojhlana to itch, or scratch, umana, sumana to hold, be contained, kuhlana to call, or be called, milna, implies either to find or be found by, to meet or be met with, but for the most part it is used inversely moojhe mila, for—muen rah pur ek dost ko mila either I met a friend on the road, or I fell in with a friend on the way.

do well to study the subject under a more systematic form in pages 120, 121, and at the same time to acquire the following abbreviations by heart, with the various significations of these most useful subsidiaries, in the composition of innumerable verbs.

yuh-aṇ here, wuh-aṇ there, kuh-aṇ where? juh-aṇ where, tuh-aṇ such or that place, kuh-eeṇ somewhere, anywhere, uor kuheen elsewhere, kuh-eeṇ nuheen nowhere, hur kuheen everywhere, kuh-eeṇ nu kuh-eeṇ somewhere or other, juhaṇ kuheen wherever, yuhaṇ kuheen hereabouts, wuh-eeṇ that very place, viz. wuh-ee-aṇ contracted to wuheen

with -turuf, -or-bughul, &c. meaning side, ward, quarter, answer the same purpose.

yuhan se hence, wuhan se thence, kuhan se whence? &c. to be seen among the postpositions from 76 to 88, most of which like above, below, having two, three, or four strings to their bow, in their substantive, postpositive, verbal and adverbial capacities. mara victim, beaten, struck, mare through, in consequence of.

126. many of the subsequent temporal adverbials, are mere pronominal compounds with ghuree hour, din day, dum moment, wuqt time, and such nouns ad libitum.

ub now, kub when? jub when, tub then.

is- cos- kis- jis- tis- wuqt- ghuree, this, that, what, which, the same-time, implying now, then, when, &c.

aj to-day, now, kul yesterday or to-morrow, purson the day before or after, turson nurson two and three days before or after.

ub tuk, aj tuk, humoz, hitherto, yet, kub tuk how long? jub tuk until, jub se since, kub se whence? &c. jub tub now and then, occasionally, jub nu tub some time or other.

tub tuk so long, aj kul, now-a-days, ubhee, just now, immediately, johcen the moment, woheen, that very instant, from a minute, twinkling.

kubhee ever, kubhee nuheen never, kubhee.

kubhee some times, seldom, kubhee nu kubhee sometime or other, roz roz, daily, bar bar often, kue bar how many times, jue bar, so often, tue bar as often, pus, pher, or phir, will, again, baree baree, alternately, ek bar once, do bar twice, &c. tis pur thereafter.

it may be remarked by the way, that in many of these adverbials the b becomes d or uo, the ee, oo, and k, g, whence jub tulug, jub lug, juolug until, kudhee, kubhoo, ever, &c.

127. various adverbials of quality, quantity, number, manner, &c. are formed as follows, and by referring to the simple and compound postpositions in pages 76, 88, a variety of adverbs will be recognized by their english versions.

ue-sa so, wue-sa such, kue-sa how ? jue-sa as, tue-sa thus, and always quintuples from zih, wook—

is- cos -kis-, &c. turih- -scorut, duol, -rah, -qudr, with words meaning manner, way, shape, mode, size, are of constant recurrence for the sa here, the uesa being resolvable to is-sa like this, and wue-sa to cos-sa like that, &c.

hokur, kur as, in capacity of, such kur as true, kyoon kur as how.

in this manner a great number of adverbials are elegantly expressed by the pluperfect participles of all verbs that can be reasonably ap-

ita this much, oota, wita that much, kita how much? jita so much, tita thus much.

itna so many, ootna, witna that many, kitna how many? jitna so many, titna that many, but quantity and number (no more than pronominal relation and interrogation,) are not always thus accurately discriminated: e is often adopted for i in eta so much, etna so many, &c. is-cos-qudr thus, that much, and so on are equally useful.

ku,ee several, kue how many? jue as many, tue so many.

khoob well, khurab ill, &c. from the adj. good, bad, &c. puhle first, rather, doosre secondly, &c.

hañ yes, nu, nuheen no, not, nor, neither, kyoona nuheen, why not? kyoona nu ho why not be? ulbuttu certainly, mootluq not at all, hurgiz by no means, never, mut don't.

shayud perhaps, ho to ho, huega, hoga may be.

ulug apart, jooda jooda, separately, ek ek one by one, ukela, tunha alone.

milkur, leke together, ukşur generally.

·buhoot, ziyadu mu h, too much, very, uor, more, bus enough, qureeb almost, thoṛa little, buṛa great, very, goya as if, şırf, luqut only.

128. as conjunctions, we meet with uor, uo, o, wu and, bhee, hee also, even, both, likewise.

ya, khwah, chaho or, either, to, tuo, phir, pus well, still, then.

ugur, gur, jo if, ugurchi although, jaño suppose, grant, jubki since.

kyoon kur because, wherefore, isliye therefore, liye, waste, and nouns denoting cause, concern, affair, and such like, with is-œs-kis-jis-tis, form a long quintuple string of compounds no less convenient than is liye here, or kahe-ko for what, wherefore, noticed in the tables of declension, which when consulted will clear this point up very satisfactorily.

siwa except, wurnu unless, tis purbhee, tuo-bhee, still, nevertheless, at least, such truly, such kur indeed.

pur, lekin but, umma, mugur, wulekin, bulki may, moreover, hurchund although, tahum, uz-buski, halanķi still, notwithstanding, in as much as, bu shurt ki on condition that, provided.

129. like the interjections of other tongues, many in the hindoostanee are nouns or verbs thrown

shabash! afreen! wah wah! kya khoob! dhuni dhun! wah jee! kya bat hue! denote joy, praise, like our bravo! well done! ha,e ha,e! hue hue! wa,e wa,e! wa,e wnela! imply grief, as alas! lackaday! chhee chhee! chul chukhe! doorho! indicate aversion, disgust, fye fye! be-gone! chulaja be chulaja get thee gone sirrah! choop! choop ruho! hush! silence! kya what? well! bus stop! plenty! lo well, behold, lo! sono! kyoon jee hear! you sir! bap re bap father father! ma ree ma mother mother! several examples among the adverbs perhaps come under this section of indeclinables, which are all more or less liable to promiscuous use and abuse in most tongues.

after what has been laid down in page 151, no one can find fault with the collection here made of all the most useful words in the language, which, as postpositions, adverbs, conjunctions, &c. often run so much into each other's division, that they cannot well be discriminated so exactly as could be wished. among them all, hee ever, just, &c., sa as, kur as, liye, wastu account, turuf side, ward, turuh manner an, dhur place, ta quantum, is this, cos that, kis what, se from, &c. will be very conspicuous ;

but kisliye wherefore? &c. are so easily resolvable, like qua propter, and similar words in the latin, by reperusing the significant particles, and attending to the composition and derivation of words introduced in this work, that we need not enlarge farther.

in proportion as the student acquires a knowledge by heart of these vocables, selected here and in the subsequent pages for that express purpose, before he proceeds to the sentences hereafter given, in support of grammatical rules, the more readily will he comprehend the drift of every example, especially if he will at the same time progressively encrease his mental store of adverbials from my dictionary or vocabulary, which can always be consulted for nouns, verbs, &c. as they may be required to explain any portion of hindoostanee composition, when, from the context, the meaning is not quite obvious. every real student will reflect on my earnest remarks in the preface, pages xxi, &c. so applicable to the matter in hand; and in every practicable case of this kind should trust almost as much, if not more, to his own genius and resources, as to research and pains with any lexicon whatever.

creation; yet animals are less subject to error, though they trust almost entirely to —, in the grand objects of their care and existence. to man — seems artificial, while to brutes — appears intuitive; the former therefore requires something very like —, before he can trust to —, in which the latter are said to have no — whatever, their hopes being limited to this — alone.

the scholar must learn, from thought only, to fill up the blanks of the preceding sentence as well as he can, and in future to do the very same thing with every hindoostanee paragraph, of which he may happen to know, or find in a dictionary, the same proportion of words, as he does in the english above, remaining ignorant, however, of the rest, as they are supposed to be ultimately produced by his own manly perseverance and deep reflection alone.

the fruits of such efforts will be stamped with different degrees of value, as the learner feels impressed with the idea, that he in some measure discovered them himself, or owed them to the labours of another person. as the first, they will be fondly cherished and retained long in his mind, like the darling children of his own fancy and judgment, while, in the latter view, they may be more frequently treated as a mere spurious breed, and committed to a very fallible stepmother's charge, viz. the memory only. the man who will not or cannot think need never expect to learn from this or any book, his own language, far less a foreign tongue, so difficult as those of the east in general are: I must therefore beseech my pupils, in this stage of their progress, to cominence seriously with the art and practice of thinking, because the transition from well conducted english studies to the hindoostance, will enable them to reason upon it as they had been accustomed to do with the other; for the grammar of all languages is so much alike in general principles, that a man has only to be well versed in his own to make it the natural stepping-stone to every other tongue.

the necessity and advantage of giving english lessons more or less easy, as pupils advance, without some of the leading words in them, as illustrated in page 158, is so obvious, that I here recommend it to the serious attention of every preceptor, who may improve upon the hint in various ways for the benefit of his pupils, through every stage in english or other tongues. I shall illustrate the matter, for the benefit of those who may think the plan worth farther consideration and improvement, by the following easy story, suited to the capacity of a child, who, if any way clever, will make more out of this elliptical lesson than most people imagine.

“ a gardener’s youngest — was walking among the fruit — of his father’s —, he saw a little — fly up and sit on one of the — of the trees ; the — lifted a stone, and was going to — it at the poor — which had just begun to — most sweetly thus :

“ my — is — of moss and hair, the — are — and shelter’d there ; when — soon shall my young — fly far from the — school — eye.”

the —’s eldest — who understood the — of birds, came up at that moment, and — out, throw down the — you hard hearted — and don’t — the innocent — in the middle of his song ; are you not — with his swelling red breast, his beautiful sharp eye, and, above all, with the — of his notes, and the familiar — he assumes, even in the — of a — like you ? ask your youngest — here, if she remembers the — which her good — read to her yesterday, of a very — boy who was very — to a harmless green — which he caught — for hunger among the — in the — of winter.

a lesson like this affords ample scope for the reasoning faculties of a child even, and gives its instructor every opportunity of exerting his own talents on the expansion of the young idea, as it shoots progressively to an intellectual tree, capable of producing, in a very short period, the fairest buds, blossoms and fruit, that the human understanding can bring forth, under the most judicious culture. I have tried this mode in the hindoo stance with wonderful success, because it is one which excites the curiosity and fans the generous pride of a young scholar, forces him to think for himself, when and where he would not otherwise bestow one moment's reflection on the subject, and creates a habit of mental application at first, which continues for life, with the most beneficial effects in every pursuit. should this elliptical mode of teaching appear worthy of a fair trial, any preceptor may immediately put it in practice, as there are innumerable collections of very easy tales, beautiful stories, and elegant extracts from our best writers, which may be employed for the proposed themes, by occasionally omitting the most prominent words, and giving them to the pupils in different classes, to complete, as well as they severally can, when left entirely to their own resources. in the "story teller" this method has been in some measure adopted, because certain words in each of the stories may not be found in the vocabulary, and these the judicious scholar will treat as so many blanks, to be filled up by that intellectual pencil which a little practice will render creative enough for this and various useful purposes.

before giving a complete list of significant symbols and particles as such, or in their capacity merely of monosyllabic words, the reader should here be apprised, that to render this most essential portion of the guide available on every occasion, he must take a serious retrospective glance at every letter in the alphabet, including all the examples which range under each, previous to the efficient study of the subsequent prefixes, interfixes, and affixes, which could not have been inserted advantageously within the limits of pages 9 and 65, devoted as they have been exclusively to the former subject entirely. without intending any very circumstantial repetition of that topic here, a short recapitulatory view or abstract of the whole, for easy reference. may prove so useful that I am inclined to give one, in which en passant the few instances omitted accidentally in their proper places, can also be enumerated, and the successive references to the foregoing pages, as 10, 13, 14, &c. will point out where and how the particular particle or word required, may be found at once, through the entire series, from u to qu. to those schojagun, jagna to wake, to waken; and the whole of our verbs that still terminate, like ope, open, with this antient postpositional sign, so prevalent in the oriental tongues, in more departments than one.

an other, minute, moment, pride, manner, as a verb it usurps the place of a, having come, and is moreover the root and pluperfect participle of the old word an-na to bring; long since superseded by l-ana to take, come, or bring. an, the plural affix of persian animates, murdan men, sug-an dogs, often becomes an q. o. in page 14, and ha in 29. anw intestinal mucus. uin eye, the letter so called, nick, middle, centre, just, immediately, a een rule, article, clause, law, institute. an is sometimes introduced for en, page 25.

jhugra-loo wrangler, dunt-aloo biter, lur-uwul bear's play, khel-uwul romping, piluwul copious and social potation. deed-ar sight, gooft-ar speech, ruft-ar gait, lon-ar salt-pit. v. below.

war, is only a modulation of wal, but occurs as a useful affix in various examples, both hindoo-

staneë and persian. jue-war lord of the manor, gaik-war a hindoo princely title, commed-war, hope-full, som-war or bar mon-day, hur-war burial-place, sometimes modified to ala, sewala jove's temple. eroo, is found in punkh-eroo a fowl, iyara, in bhuṭ-iyara, bhuṭ-iyarin host, hostess, innkeeper, ora in huṣ-ora laugh-er, lurk-ora, -oree, a man or woman being a parent, not barren or sterile.

ḍu, ḍu, ṭu, tu, ta, te, tee, thee, ṭha, ut, at, sa, se, see, so, soo, as, os, and shu, ish, 44 to 54.

d affixed to the second person singular of all persian tenses, forms the plural in eed or ed.

oot dunce, uet man, also uet ueta. ut, wut, hut, ahut, abstract affix like our ness, &c. 45 to 47. see page 171.

see, sow, sew, stitch, soo-ur good animal, sow. a queer contrast to koo-kur dog, cur, evil doer.

zu, za, ze, zee, zoo, ja, jee, jo, jue, juo, jun, j,h, and chu, 55 to 57. for chu, buchu may occur : thus, chuh-buchu trough, moogh buchu young mogul.

ku, ka, ke, kee, ko, koo, kue, kuee, kuo, kur, ak, ek, from 58 to 62.

khah, kho, ga, ge, gee, and go, ga,e, guo, 63. the abstract particle gee for ee` seems merely euphonic in bar-gee vicissitude, turn, gundu-gee rotten-ness, bundu-gee servitude, respects, and such vocables, but has a more substantial import in pesh-gee advances, purwan-gee verbal orders, ban-gee sample, khan-gee domestic, also demirep. with dee wangee madness, we must never confound deewan-jee master-factor, by any absurd perversion of these letters in jug, whose separate powers here are unchangeable.

if gee be a euphonic modulation of ee ; tee; nee, in kum-tee deficiency, chand-nee moon-light, instead of kumee, chandee, seem not less so, though the last applies rather to solid silver, than the congenial hue of that planet alone ; and this very chand e moreover denotes the crown of the head, whether adorned with silver locks or not. the old infinitives julun, dhowun, kuturun, munjun, to burn, wash, clip, scour, respectively apply to heat, washing, paring, tooth-powder, as lugut, burhut do to expense, cost, encrease, growth.

the imperative plural is also an abstract noun, buna, o management, ornament, duba, o influence, churha, o ascent, mila, o, milap, concord, reconciliation, bika, o sale, bika, oo for sale, muna, o persuasion, from bunna to do, be made, bunana to make, &c. q. v. in pages 132, &c. words like hath hand, moonh mouth, face, ankḥ eye, sur head. thus, express hand-ed huṭh-a, faced, mouth-ed, moonh-a, eyed unḥ-a, head-ed sur-a.

ghu and qu being congenials, are peculiarly liable to mutual substitution, an event common, not only to every subdivision of the letters, but to many others, in which their organic classification, the grand characteristic of my hindoostanee alphabet, is not so apparent. whence, among innumerable contingencies of this description which pervade the whole, puegham, pueyam message. on the transmutation of letters, however, the student should consult the story teller, page cxlix, for the most ample information on this momentous subject to every hindoostanee colloquist, who may be ambitious of being every where intelligent and intelligible, during his residence in british india.

the foregoing significant particles will prove so truly convenient for the analytic and synthetic process with oriental vocables, on which very great proficiency in the hindoostanee must ultimately depend, that I could not resist the impulse to furnish, as I have done in page 164, every facility of this sort to the inquisitive scholar, by way of exercise to his memory, before he applies his judgment progressively in the derivation and composition of words, as they pass in review before him, through the whole of the examples. under this impression, I have collected below the most common prepositive, intermediate, and adjunctive, inseparable particles (or words used as such) which could not appear before as mere letters, that they also may be learned completely by heart with the postpositions, from 76 to 84, and the adverbials which will be found in pages 151, &c.

an extensive class of attributes results from the junction of adjectives (participles included) and nouns, or adjectives with adjectives; as another also does from two nouns repeated or conjoined, thus ;

kooshadu-dil, open-hearted. shikustu-khatir, mun-mulcen, broken-hearted, &c. zur-must.

dhun-mudhec, purse-proud. tihee-dust, chhoo-chha-hath, empty-handed, &c. tundooroost, healthy, well. poor mughz well filled, kul-jeebha, siyahkam, foul-mouthed. pust-boolund, nu-shchfuraz, ooncha-neechea, rough, rugged, uneven. bhula-chunga, shheeh-salim, sound, safe and sound. doobla-putla, slender. mota-tazu, plump. door-duraz, distant. chuo-ra-chukla, spacious. khurab-khustu, ruined. colta-poolta, zer-zubur, topsy-turvy. ga,o-doom, taper, sloping, a cow-tail. moonh-zor, seenu-zor, headstrong, hard-mouthed, unruly, obstinate. ahoo-chushin, mirg-nuen, fawn-eyed, timorous, bashful. goolab-chushm-meek-eyed, &c. mahee-poosht, convex, fish-backed. sug-shifut currish. bun-manoos, savage. murd-mizaj manly. poombu-duhun, mealy-mouthed, afut-zudu calamity struck, pale-mara frost bitten, burq-zudu, gaj-mara struck with lightning.

numerous nouns of reciprocation, &c. are formed in this manner :—kuha-kuhee altercation. chooma-chatee dalliance. mara-maree, scuffle. dekha-dekhee emulation. duoṛa duo-ree hurry flurry. mookka mookkee, ghoomsum ghoomsa fisty-cuffs. bat cheet, gooft o goo, qeel o qal, gup shup chit chat, conversation, tittle tattle. galec giluoṛ a brawl, reciprocal scolding. ghool ghupara, shor shur, d̥hoom d̥hain uproar, hubbub, noise, hurly-burly, pomp and splendour. pee-ch-paneē, wish-wash, slip slop. saṣ baṣ, cheeṣ-buṣṣ, kul kaṇṭa, deru ḍuṇḍa, ṭuṇṭ ḡhuṇṭ, furniture, baggage, gear. uḡur buḡur, buḷa, e boḡghma stuff, trash, trumpery. kuḥ buḥ, luṛke baḷe, luṛke puṛke young ones, brats, ḡhuṛ baṛ, khaṇ o maṇ family, household, muḡur-ḥuḡur deceit, khōṛd-bōṛd embezzlement, j̥hooṭ̥h mooṭ̥h a lie, fiction, peḥ paḥ evasion, heḷu-huḡaḷu, ṭaḷ muṭol prevarication, uḍul buḍul chopping and changing.

these are produced generally by a kind of alliteration that seems quite congenial with a hindoo-stanee ear, there being few motions or accidents connected with sound, hurry, &c. which are not accurately discriminated by a large class of imitative verbs for this purpose that may properly be styled reiterative; whence j̥hun j̥hun jingle, ṭ̣hun ṭ̣hun clink, ḅhin ḅhin buzzing, suṇ suṇ simmering, p̣hoos p̣hoos whispering, ḳhul ḳhul undulation, kiḷbiḷ peristaltic motion, ḍhuk ḍhuk palpitation: besides these, we often meet with the colloquial repetitions which prove at first so disgusting to strangers, viz. roṭee-oṭee cḥhooree-ooree, chuokee-uokee, baṣuṇ-waṣuṇ, ruṣee-wuṣee, whose reiterated syllables are not always, in my opinion, wholly useless; on the contrary, they may occasionally possess a very comprehensive meaning ; such as bread, or any thing of the kind to eat ; a knife, or any cutting instrument, wanted in a hurry to cut with ; a chair, stool, bench, seat ; a plate, dish, vessel, bason, &c. and rusce-wusee probably means a rope, cord, string, or in short any thing to tie with, when in great haste. to the foregoing, many more may be added, that cannot be enumerated in this work, but of which a competent notion may be formed from similar combinations in the scottish and other semi-barbarous dialects, often much more expressive than the most refined language. croudy, moudy, ranty, lanty, strop and roop, to the ear of a caledonian will sound well enough, but after perusing the present remarks, the sense must become pretty apparent by a little reflection about lang kale, kale runts, stump, rump, &c.

personal and other nouns, over and above those already inserted, are likewise expressed by the present and perfect participles ; as the following all spring from infinitives, bukna to speak, dhurna to place, dun, &c. rumna to roam, a park.

kurta doer, actor, agent data giver, generous.

chhata umbrella.	kholta open, wide.
purta average.	janta knowledge.
manta sway, influence.	sookhad drought, dry land multa worn coin.	pooja worship, adoration.
phirta rejected returned.	ghera circle, blockade.

many are also the same as the infi. or imp. rona weeping, tearful, sona sleepy, mootnā pisser, nuchna dancer, sikh scholar, jan soul, life, conjuror, especially in composition, bur-bol boaster, dil-chul brave, unklmcond inexperienced, and to this form by adding ee, we have boleee speech, muree mortality, pheree circuit, khowjee searcher, joree pair. a reduplication of the neuter or active preterite, with the causal, denotes any thing ready done, as buna bunaya readymade, seekha sikhaya ready taught, pukka pikkaya ready cooked, khoda khodaya ready dug, applicable whenever the verbs admit of such a conjunction.

for words numerically compounded, consult pages 201 observing that several names of places, &c. are thus formed, viz. chihil-sitoun [forty pillars, a palace at ghazeepoor, so called, which our countrymen, who attend little to true pronunciation, very easily convert to chelsea-tomb!] bara-duree, puch-muhla, tirpuoliya, tirsoolee, chihil-pa,e, char-pa,e, which will prove so obvious, after consulting the numerals. that the least attention will make the learner master of this mode of composition.

the following proper names (with many more that cannot be enumerated here) are much used among the moosulmans: buhadoor ulee the warrior of ulee: khooda bukhsh the gift of god: ubdollah the slave of god: ghoolam moohummud the slave of moohummud: kulbhusun the dog of husun: uzeez collah dear to god. mooueyoon ood deen defender of the faith. usud ulee the lion of ulee: sher moohummud the tiger of moohummud.—

and as few names in this language are not derivatives compounded, the hindoos also have their krishoon-dueal, gunesh-das, rainsingh, &c. though it must be admitted, that the natives of every description are apt to give their children, on particular occasions, the most humiliating appellations, from a superstitious notion that this will appease or propitiate an offended deity: whence—koorkoot sweepings, phenkoo outcast, koela charcoal, kookur dog, kale blackey, chhekuoree six cowries, chirkit, dregs. some names have their origin in the time or place of the person's birth, &c. thus mungulee, boodhoo, etwaree, ramzance, jungulee, lushkuree, muedanee; teepoo, from teep mark whence teepoo sahib tippoo saib! while others are in fact a kind of titular compellation assumed by or conferred on individuals or particular classes of men; such are—

pande, tiwaree, misur, dhoobe, gaikwar titles of various classes of brahmuns, princes. v. 166.

khodawund, huzrut, ap, junabi alee, juhan punah, qiblul alum, moonee, and some others are used for worship, highness, saint, &c. but they are best acquired by practice; yet we must not omit here those conciliatory appellations that are so commonly used in hindoostan for people in humble stations, since it clearly shows to what lengths the natives carry their flattery and politeness to each other.

bihishtee divine (too often degraded, by bad pronouncers among us, to beasty !) a waterman.

the names of places may in general be traced by attentively considering what I have already said in page 180 on this subject ; and the learner will recollect, that besides their founders, the indians also use the names of the different divinities, prophets, saints, &c. compounded with abad, poor, nugur, &c. formerly enumerated, (and sometimes with gaṇw, whence chut-gaṇw, burā-gaṇw, kuhlgaṇw, more familiarly chittigong, buragong, and colgong). when any occur without one or other of these particles, they may in general be considered as primitives, or compounds involved in impenetrable obscurity, to those who are not well versed in the sunṣkrit or some other aboriginal speech, whence it was refined from the purakrit or vulgar tongue.

128 a sort of mechanical table of the arabic forms, most common in the hindoostance, may be now submitted to the learner, who will hereafter reap advantages from it, proportioned to the pains he may bestow on the whole of the examples below, as they all apply to the persian and arabic languages, both of which he may yet find it his duty and interest to acquire, as well as the hindoostanee.

there are certain letters termed servile, viz. n h y ee n w oo m t l s, because they alone assist in all the changes and inflexions to which words are subject in arabic ; the rest, including also the serviles, are all found as radicals, or such letters as must always remain in the vocabulary under discussion, in whatever state it may be found.

to distinguish the serviles in each example. they and their short vowels will appear in italics, but the intermediate diacritical points, or short vowels of the roots, u i oo, though constantly changing their position, may be generally retained as roman, since one or other of them must exist in every word, which is not the case with respect to the serviles, whose relative position and peculiar effect, however, will best appear from inspection.

fu,ul act, and its branches, fa,il agent, mu,fol object, &c. are the standard forms in arabic grammars, but from the equivocal letter u, it was so troublesome to the hindoostanees, that they have for a long time preferred zurb, &c. below, as a much easier model than fu,ul. I have therefore followed their example in this respect, though, in syllabling words, they generally call the first, fa kulimu, the second, uen kulimu, and the third lam kulimu, from the component letters of fu,ul, viz. fa f, uen u, and lam l, the u being merely a short letter, not counted as a radical, but so essential to the pronunciation of each root, that I have marked those vowels only in italics, whose appearance depends entirely on the serviles in each, as in zurbut, the t being a mere servile letter, whereas the radicals z r b, will be traced in the remotest branches, moozaribut, &c. in some of the various inflexions, the learner will discover a reduplication of the radical letter, and should recollect this circumstance along with the different positions of the shorts u i ∞, the long a ee oo, and the serviles t m, &c. these being, in fact, the grand pivots whereon the whole scheme of the arabic conjugation, declension, &c. hinges, the general mechanism of which will appear perfectly simple and evident in the annexed hindce-arabic prospectus. this tabular view will answer almost every useful purpose of the practical hindoostanee, persian, and turkish scholar, while it will, at the same time greatly promote the study and knowledge of arabic, so essential for the profound orientalist, that it ought, sooner or later, to be acquired by every person who wishes to cut a capital

ukṣur general, from kuṣrut frequency, of the form zurbut, and uzlum tyrannical, from zoolm oppression, like zorb, with ghureeb humble, ghoorbut (zoorbut) humility: few radicals in arabic being ramified through every form in that language, the scholar therefore must not wonder at seeing roots occasionally defective in some one or other of their branches, or at his being now and then puzzled with certain changes, until, as a more accomplished orientalist, he can acquire all the necessary information respecting the tuuleelat from arabic grammarians. this will ultimately obviate every difficulty, which certainly may be the case after a reasonable period of residence in british india, and the previous acquisition of those sine qua nons of that vast region, the hindooostanee and persian tongues.

we have now reached the augmented trilateral and quadrilateral infinitives, whose active and passive participles, when they really do exist, occur thus :

60	tuzurncoob	quadrilaterals really make their

61 tumuzroob appearance so rarely in either the 62 tuzurboot persian or hindoostance, that we 63 tuzuorcoob might have easily dispensed with 64 tuzurwcoob their insertion, had I not wished 65 tuzuercoob to exhibit a general view of these 66 tuzurbee curious forms, many of which 67 izrinbab will aid the scholar in the deriva-68 izrinba tion and composition of innumerable vocables in the four grand languages of the moosulmans, by a slight attention to the mechanism of zurb alone, through every stage of its various transformations in the present sketch of the foregoing list, comprehending the whole roots called muşdur or infinitives, including all their possible derivatives, the participles of the last 18 excepted, which either are totally wanting or never can be adopted in the hindoostanee and persian. several of the roots are denominated meemce from their initial being m. thus 33 muzrub, 34 mizrub exactly resemble the locals of zurb and zirb, which proves what has been asserted in page 191 that various parts of speech are at times confounded with or encroach upon each other's more immediate province, like our own abstracts justice, acquaintance, relation, majesty, beauty, applicable likewise to persons, so curiously in french, that the king even is transformed by the fiat of grammar to her majesty, though no woman in her own right can by the salic law become so in consequence of sex alone.

by way of exercise, let us suppose the existence of a word, such as huld, varied through all the 68 radical forms, as hild, hcoold, hulud, &c. as far as ihlinda, corresponding with izrinba, we have nothing more to do than to frame from these in rotation thus: halid, muhlood, muhlud, mihlud, uhlud, hullad, huleed, mcohlid, mcohlud, mcohullid, mcohullud, mcohalid, mcohalud, mcohtulid, mcohtulud, mcohnulid, mcohnulud, mcothullid, mcothullud, mcothulid, mcothulud, mcohlidd, and so on to the number 50, beyond which these participial branches are seldom met with, upon either hindoo or persian ground.

it may be said, that many of these forms, in any given word, are not in use; be it so, but they may all occur in half a dozen of examples, and it signifies nothing to the expert scholar whether inşaf justice, mcoşif just, tuşneef, composition, mcoşunnif an author, be the examples under inspection, or their prototypes, izrab, ihlad, mcozrib, mcohlid, tuzreeb, tuhleed, mcozurrib, mcohullid, or any other conformous vocables. some instances like ilm knowledge, alim knowing, muuloom known, tuuleem instruction, mcoullim preceptor, mcoullum taught, &c. uql reason, aqil wise, muuqool reasonable,

&c. may, at first sight, seem more intricate than they will prove in reality, as the knack of forming them also is very readily acquired by the attentive student; nay hadee guide, qazee, mooftee judge, daee claimant, moonshee secretary, from hooda guidance, quza, futwa decree, duwa claim, insha composition, with a numerous tribe of this description will soon become so familiar, as to be easily imbibed en passant through such formations, in which sail querist, musool questioned, muhdee guided, muduoo claimed, and some few more may nevertheless be troublesome enough to the hindoostanee tyro.

admitting that in arabic the vocables sinf, sunf, &c. mean snuff, sanif snuffer, snuffy, musnoof snuffed, musnuf snuffing place, misnuf snuffing spoon, usnuf snuffier, sunnaf snuffiest, isnaf snuffing, moosnif snuff giver, moosnuf receiving snuff, tusneef making snuff, moosunnif snuff-maker, snuffist, moosunnuf made into snuff, moosanufut mutual snuffing, moosanif, moosanuf, tusancof affecting to take snuff, mootusanif mootusanuf; we are thus furnished with a mechanical specimen of arabic roots and ramifications, applicable so far to thousands of such examples, and though the one here introduced be suppositious entirely, it may convey a correct notion of all the rest, to persons who have minds to conceive and heads to guide philological operations of this sort from any of the 68 roots.

129 plurals in arabic are divided into regulars, duals, paucals, and multitudinous, in all 36, besides the duals, which are known at once by the simple addition of uen to any form, whence zidduen opposites, waliduen parents, and turufuen, both parties.

 neither are very frequently met with in the hindoostanee.

 the only form of these very familiar in the hindoostanee, though not, as in arabic, restricted to nouns of paucity. plurals of the form uzrab, may belong to radicals like zoorb, zurub, and some others, as well as zureeb; an observation that may be extended to the rest, kumal, ku-

malat, perfections; and some have two plurals depending upon one or different singulars, though their signification be the same. ghoolam a slave, has ghilmut in the plural, like zirbut, also ghilman, but they seldom occur.

some of the above forms, especially those left—blank, are of no great use in the hindoostanee. words having medial a or uo in the singular, are often thus formed in the plural, like uzrab, hal state, uhwal; bab chapter, ubwab; mal wealth, umwal; fuoj army, ufwaj, quoj wave, umwaj; in which the radical letter corresponding with r of uzrab, is converted, by a process peculiar to the arabic, to w, as in the foregoing examples, which with yuom a day, ueyam days, may evidently serve, in the meantime, as practical models of all the rest. besides these arabic modifications of plurality, we must moreover recollect that ha, at, gan, an, jat, present themselves as persian plural signs occasionally in the hindoostanee: bar-ha times, murdan men, buch-gan children, bagh-at gardens, zilu-jat provinces, and that the former often admit a

reduplicated final consonants were formerly omitted by me as inconvenient and uncouth ; yet, as their mere appearance can do no harm, but rather some good, in the arabic department of the hindoostanee, I have endeavoured to preserve them in the roman character also ; whence ḥuqq right, khutt epistle, ḥudd boundary, ḥiss sense, rudd rejected, diqq vexed, especially as these now prepare us to meet with khḥootḥ epistles, ḥḥooqḥ rights, ḥḥoodḥ boundaries, muḥḥood bounded, mḥḥuqqiq having a right, muḥsoos sensible, murḥood condemn'd, mudqooq hectic, agreeably to the standard for each respectively, viz. zurb, zḥrb, zḥroob, muzroob, mḥzurrīb, to which the reader may refer, contrasting the three radicals of zurb with those of ḥuqq, ḥudd ; of zḥrb with ḥiss, diqq, and so on with all the rest, as they may yet catch his eye in the hindoostanee, persian, turkish, and arabic languages ; to the whole of which my present ne plus ultra scheme of hindēe-roman orthoepigraphical alphabet will apply with the greatest ease and perspicuity ; nay, with two or three slight additions, it may be extended as a universal character to every tongue under the sun. among the other thorny paths of arabic etymology, a string of 36 barren or unproductive roots are enumerated, under the title of ismi jamid dead nouns, which they actually are, so far as relates to the hindoostanee, as it can hardly boast of more than a dozen of them existing in this living language.

130 the subjoined cardinals are so arranged that the first in the line is the one most used, the others, up to eleven, are merely component parts of compounds, the whole of which will be evident from inspection, and their etymology here will so far assist the learner's memory in this rather difficult department of hindoostanee philology, as many of the persian numerals have also been added for this purpose in italics.

several transmutations of letters here are far from being consistent with any general rules, to which the rest are subservient, till we account for the chhu of soluh sixteen, by a similar change, from chirurgion to surgeon, among ourselves. every nonal from nine to ninety-nine, seems the negation to the next number, con-tees thirty-nine being evidently an elliptical mode of expressing ek nu tees, one less than thirty; a hypothesis extensively applicable both among the cardinals and their fractional parts, if not to nine, novem, nuo, as mere negatives of ten, en, vem, cem, uh, us, since our tcn must be two-en contracted, because mankind originally went no farther than three, four or five, and taking the last for granted, ten, twoen gives a good idea of the supposed reduplications in english, whatever the other monosyllables vem, &c. may prove in their several tongues. see page 57, line 12.

it is not easy to discriminate the component portion of each numeral that denotes its decimal import, as this varies almost at every step from uo, us, uh, ees, as, a, an, wun, pun, th, ur, see, we, be; to say nothing of the euphonic r, l, n, a, t, s, every where visible, but sometimes under the same cloud whence th, uth, glimmers for ten in sath sixty, and uen for teen, panch, sat, in some numbers the whole series, from ten to ninety, may be rendered very simple indeed in this way, dus o ek, bees o do, tees o teen, chalees o char, teen beesee, char beesee, &c.; but dus ek, bees ek, rather mean about 10 (9 or 11) or 20 (19 or 21) as an elliptical mode of expressing—dus, ek kum ya ziyad ten, one more or less.

fractionals.

the following fractionals set etymology almost at defiance, and on the whole are so intricate, that practice only can make them agreeable. ha, ee, th, pa, wa, seem to imply fourth, quarter, fraction, part. the word for three quarters pu wun, puo-na, clearly designates that it is pa, o nu ek quarter less one, puo-

ne puchas quarter less fifty, like the nonals already explained, and su-wa, probably points out the association of a fourth with any given cipher, thus, su-wa do, two with a quarter. adha, adh half, in the subsequent fractionals is strangely converted to erh, rh, and very inexplicably compounded afterwards, but in sarhe we have the social su again, sarhe teen three with a half, which pervades all the rest.

from su-wa suo 125, or one and a quarter hundred, this mode of reckoning would prove convenient enough, when fairly acquired, were not suwa do huzar, 2250, more perplexing even than do huzar do suo uor puchas, though not quite so prolix.

131. the divisions of time come next under notice.

hindoostanee.	hinduwec.	persian.	english.
etwar	rubee-bar	yuk-	sunday.
som-war, } or peer }	som-bar	doo-	monday.
mungul	mungul-bar	si-	tuesday.
boodh	boodh-bar	chuhar-	{ wednes- day.
joomurat, } or biphe }	brishput-bar, } or lukhee-bar }	punj-	{ thurs- day.
joomu	(sookr-bar) or—adeenu		friday.
suneechur } or bar }	sunee-bar	shumbu	saturday.

the moosulman's etwar, adit bar, or sunday, commences with what we, as well as the hindoos, call saturday night, suneechur kee rat, and so on throughout the week, whence joomu rat, properly friday night, denotes among the mooslims our thursday. as this confusion of time may be productive of mischief, in cases of evidence for capital offences, the reader will not, I trust, be displeased with the present digression. suppose a moosulman were on his trial for murdering a hindoo on tuesday night, mungul kee rat, in our, and the hindoos sense of the word, all the witnesses, if moosulmans, and aware of the above circumstance, could save the criminal though guilty, by swearing positively to his being far from the spot on mungul kee rat ; because this, in their way of reckoning time, coincides with what we, and the hindoos, call somwar kee rat, monday night ; while our mungul kee rat, on the other hand, is in fact named boodh kee rat, by the followers of moohummud, though we and the hindoos would certainly call this wednesday night of theirs, our tuesday night, and vice versa. now, in such a case, an alibi might be clearly established by the evidences upon oath, and that too without being guilty of perjury de jure, whatever they may be de facto, as they are here supposed to know, that their different depositions will be taken down, and translated verbatim as they make them, viz mungul kee rat, which we would interpret as tuesday night, and the alibi set up on this foundation clears the prisoner, while it screens

the witnesses also, because they may safely say, we swore to his being absent from the spot where the murder was committed, on tuesday night it is true, according to your ideas of the matter, yet we undoubtedly meant no more by doing so, than that on our monday night the culprit was many miles distant from the place the crime was perpetrated at, upon your and the hindoos tuesday night. if this proposition can be reversed, so as to affect the life of an innocent man, I tremble at the very idea of it, and shall feel truly happy indeed, if the present extended digression put people in future more on their guard, in all matters depending upon time ; particularly my military readers, who may yet be employed on the most important services, whose success must often depend on the accuracy of the instructions, given in hindoostanee, to an inferior native officer. in night attacks, ambuscades, signals, sallies, &c. to be concerted some days previous to their execution, between a moosulman and a british officer, if the latter has ordered the former to carry a particular operation into effect on mungul kee rat, as tuesday night, his expectations will evidently be anticipated one whole day, as the moosulman, according to his notion of time, will in this case do the duty required upon monday night. to point out the possible fatal tendency of such a blunder, on particular occasions, is a task that I shall leave entirely to the reader's own imagination, being much easier conceived than described, in its fullest extent, and application even to some of those mischances, which have at times befallen individual officers and detachments in india, the real causes whereof will for ever be buried with the dead men, who never could tell or convey to their countrymen one word of their woful tale and its terrible effects.

din is a day, aj this or to-day, aj rat this or to-night, din diya day light. but war or bar only occurs in composition, unless we admit mas ka bar, ~~the~~ the last day of the month, as an exception; I question however if this be good hindoostanee, although much used by all our domestics in bungala, either for the last or first day of the month, as these may be connected with muster or pay day. the letters d and b both infer two, and that division of time also called dewus, din, dies, day, perhaps from some latent connexion with the expression, "and the evening and the morning were the first day;" in other words, darkness was first, and light diya, second in order. see page 31, 32. kul, purson, turson, nurson, signify yesterday, &c. to-morrow, &c. indifferently, but the sense is always restricted to past or future by the

their turn must fall in with moohurum also, while the hindoo solar year uniformly begins on our 11th 12th or 13th march.

this however varies much in its value, and the extremes may probably be 18 and 14 roopees to the moohur, according to its intrinsic worth in gold, or the caprices of the money-changers at the time, as they frequently extort whatever they please in this way, from all other classes of people. the ṭuka, is termed also pukka puesa, or double puesa, the other being named kucha single. the bungalees call roopiyu, ṭuka; and the one-fourth sookee, sekee; the final ee is frequently changed to a, in such words, without affecting their meaning, whence sooka, seeka, pa,ola, &c. though udhela, and udḥelee, as may be seen above, are very different things. the chhedam is moreover termed dookra; but, after all, except with the puesa, ana, roopiyu, and moohur, the stranger will not at first have much business or connection. as he prolongs his stay or extends his enquiries, he will learn what hoons, kubrees and puns also are, not forgetting that pue-sa is literally and truly a farth-ing, or the fourth part of an ana, and therefore comes as nearly as possible to our penny. very satisfactory lists, and most useful tables of weights and measures, being now inserted in the several east-india registers, it would be needless for me to reprint them; I shall therefore make but one general reference, for every information of this sort, to the most accurate works which are procurable in this country, or at the printing-offices of the several presidencies in british india.

it is now time to furnish the scholar with a very brief and practical illustration of those hindoostanee principles, which are most essential, though they have not yet been demonstrated in this way, in these sheets, for such a view of the subject will be the best possible prelude to the variegated collection of larger, more difficult exercises in prose and verse, which must terminate the present section of the work.

23 kootta gosht khata hue, the dog eats flesh ; kootte ko panee de, give water to the dog ; kootte ko mut maro, do not strike the dog ; kootte ka sir kala hue, pur coske puer scofued, huen uor coskee ankhen lal, the head of the dog (or dog's head) is black, but his feet are white, and his eyes red ; wooh jata hue, he goes ; cos se lo, take from him ; coska beta uor cos kee betee his son and his daughter ; coske bap ke sath, along with his father ; yih kam ka murd hue, he (this) is a useful man ; nor iskee joroo kam kee uorut, and his wife is a useful woman.

24 must speak for itself, after a careful revision, without which fifty pages of vital importance to oriental scholars, of every class, must prove little better than waste paper, whose due cultivation, however, in persevering hands, will become a fertile field for rearing the most excellent philological crops, universally applicable to the study of all languages.

25, gudhe ke kaṇ lumbe huen, an ass's ears are long ; gudhon ke age (men) mut ja o, do not go be-fore the asses, or in front of, by fore-part of the asses.

26 to 30 inclusive are so self-evident, as to need no farther elucidation. See pages 65, &c.

31, ghuer uz khoda ke bil koll ko,ee nuheen humara, besides god, we are entirely destitute of any friend, is the most appropriate quotation here, and is taken from a very popular elegy in hindoostan, among a particular sect of the moosulmans,

32, koh i pusund ko puhconche, they reached the hill of selection; siwa,e tareekke ke roo e zuumeen pur, con talibool ilmon ko koochli nuzur nu aya, except darkness, nothing else appeared on the surface of the earth, to those followers of science (students).

33 to 44 of pages 68, 72, are all so well reflected, from the large etymological mirrors between pages 98 and 99, that farther explanation may eclipse, but can hardly add to the light shining from those two copious tables of the law or grand code of universal inflection in hindoostanee philology.

41, kul kee ukhbar uor ghur ka usbab kuhan huen? where are yesterday's newspaper and the household furniture? yuhan ke ushraf-on ka uh-wal toom ko muuloom hue, do you know the condition of the gentry here? Read page 71.

45, lurka (or lurke ko) mat pukro, do not sieze the boy, lurke ne lurkee maree or lurke ko mara, the boy struck the girl.

46, ghora se ghoree buree hue, the mare is bigger than the horse; but this horse is larger than that mare. pur os ghoree se yih ghora bura hue; tis pur bhee toomhara ghora dono se bih tur hue, nevertheless your horse is better than both, and mine is the best of all, uor mera sub se uchchha hue.

47, 48, and 49 are in themselves sufficiently obvious, only son requires confirmation from-ya rubb humson ko pueda kurke, o god! having created (beings) like us; ap ko tuen ub gulle ka pas ban bunaya, thou hast constituted thyself shepherd of the flock.

50, 51, comprize six pages, from 75 to 80, wherein there is nothing which deserves more animadversion in this place.

52, 53, in 81, 88, occupy a similar space, which contains various adverbs, used as postpositions also; bahur ja, o go out, bheetur a, o come in, ghur ke bahur rukho place without the house, ghur ke bheetur ko, ee nuheen there is no body within the house, sahib ke waste for the gentleman, surdar kee khatir (ko) for the commander, for the commander's sake, ghur ke turuf home-wards.

54, of p.97, in connection with the etymological prospectus, displays a general summary of hindoostanee inflection, which I cannot make more perfect by any amplification in detail here, but shall leave the scholar to apply the theory laid down, under this principle, to the practice of the language, in the stories both of this guide and the ortheopigraphical ultimatum, which are well calculated to bring the subject home to the conviction of every student, who can also extend his researches to the hindoostanee dialogues.

55 to 63, from p.99 to 111, exhibit such complete tabular views of gender, and so clearly evince the nature and extent of the rules which apply to both masculine and feminine nouns, that farther enlargement has become needless, while a reference to the subsequent exercises in prose and verse can so effectually remove every doubt on these heads.

64 to 131 are equally explicit, as the bare inspection of them successively will demonstrate, to every pupil at all versed in the grammar of the english, or any one living or dead language, who will patiently exert his own intellectual faculties on this theme.

the subsequent verbal, and free translations, will do more to unfold the idiom and syntax of the hindoostanee to beginners, than a volume expressly written on the subject. whoever shall, persist for a few months, with other stories or extracts, in this manner, will not only acquire an extensive stock of words, but a great facility of producing extempore the most accurate, if not elegant, english versions, from any portion of a hindoostanee work, and vice versa, as more particularly illustrated by the ixth exercise. a — is placed to represent the participial sign hoo,a, or any particle which cannot well be translated, like ne, ko, &c., that the reader may be able to follow every word, with ease and advantage, from bare inspection, as he proceeds through the whole of the exercises.

two children hungry, thirsty, some one's house went, he—each one's abilities of trial for sake, one side table on, some wine and sugar place gave, and other side, a little cold water and plain bread. the wise boy—bread and water with, his own belly—filled and thirst—quenched, the silly boy—the wine's red colour and the sugar's sweetness which saw, much delight with, them—drank and ate, but good any not was, nay his thirst more became, though his belly—mere air with filled—found, but own mistakes remedy any not make could, because the time past gone had. true it is, that many things apparently excellent are, and interior in produce their little is, for instance, the blooming rose of, with colour and fragrance—although beautiful is, yet the flowering cotton of, mankind of respect in, ten fold beneficial is.

two hungry and thirsty boys went to a person's house, who, in order to try their several abilities, placed before them on one side of the table some wine and sugar, and on the other side, a little plain bread and cold water. the intelligent boy filled his belly and quenched his thirst with the bread and water, while the foolish youth, attracted by the red colour of the wine and the sweetness of the sugar, eat and drank them with great avidity, but without the smallest advantage. on the contrary, his thirst increased, while he found his belly filled with mere air; but he could not rectify his error, because the opportunity was lost. the fact is, that many things apparently are excellent, yet their intrinsic value is small indeed; thus, although the rose blooms with all the charms of fragrance and beauty, still the flowering of the cotton tree is ten times more beneficial to mankind.

the moral is obvious, that one's own language, as the most useful, should be first cultivated and well understood; ergo, the vernacular tongues of the countries we visit, as rational beings, should be attained before we commence their learned or extraneous languages.

whoever wise lad is, his book own house in without bidding read does, and a boy ignorant own book—play's account, a shelf on tossing place doth, although his mother father this bad conduct from, thousand prohibitions make.
the first youth that noble steed's manner is, that whom for whip necessary not is, and the second that mule headstrong to like is, which bridle not obeys. in short, the one boy, if truth you ask, then as if bee's honey after is,
and its sting towards sight not makes, and the other, worthless butterfly after running is, and thus indeed his labour—merely its painted wings

a boy who is wise, reads his book at home without orders, and an ignorant youth, for the sake of play, throws his book on the shelf, although his parents forbid such misconduct a thousand times. the former lad resembles the noble steed for whom no whip is required, and the latter is like that headstrong mule which does not obey the bridle. in short, one boy seems in reality to be in pursuit of the bee's honey, regardless of its sting; while the other hies after a worthless butterfly, and thus, for its painted wings alone, he gives all his labour to the winds.

many military men, who, comparatively speaking, can have little to do with the persian, have wasted days, months, and years upon it, that might have produced much more solid advantage, had they been devoted to hindoostanee, since hardly one in a hundred can expect those high situations, in which the learned languages of india are requisite, and even then the hindoostanee is indispensable, for such obvious reasons, that he who runs may read, independent of its being the practical highway to all the rest.

a great merchant was, his two sons were, few days in the merchant died, father's property both—share took, one—two three months in, his own whole wealth dissipated bad men's counsel by; the other—traffic selection made, good men's advising from, one a beggar became, the other wealthy. thus, whoever the virtuous of direction shall obey, his welfare will be, and whoever wicked of (words) shall follow, his evil will be, as these two of was.

there was an opulent merchant who had two sons; the merchant died in a short space of time, and both divided their father's property between them. one of them in a few months dissipated the whole of his fortune, at the instigation of bad men, the other engaged in commerce by the advice of good people. the first became a beggar, the second, a rich man. thus, whoever shall follow the counsel of the good, will prosper, and he who lends an ear to the wicked will not succeed, as in these two examples here.

had a taste for useful literary improvement, by acquiring the popular tongue, sooner met with but a small share of the countenance that hath too often been given, by example, to dissipation, pride, ostentation, and folly in india, that country would have long ago produced better orientalist than it can even yet do. and many more men able to converse with the natives, as gentlemen, in their several dialects, including the military or camp language,—the hindoostanee, lately so deservedly noticed by the supreme local authorities, and in the most convincing manner.

then that blossom's fragrance and hue—here to allured, that without will, it's plucking of desire, his heart in created was, just as own hand its leaves to had conveyed, instantly him to a great many thorns, leaves beneath, sight came, through fear—hand pulled back and empty handed went away. by chance his young brother far off seeing was, this matter—conception made notwithstanding age in little was, but heart in big, those thorns of not afraid, boldly the flower plucked off, nay with it a fruit also so fine hand (to) came, that as much that flower's plucking in pain borne had, that even heart from forget made. then whatever person, who prickles of fear from, blossom not take can, his senses when perfumed was and what fruit hath he got?

a boy saw a very beautiful flower at the side of a walk ; when he approached the place where it was, the fragrance and hue of the flower were such, as to create an irresistible desire in his breast to pluck it. just as his hand reached the leaves, he discovered a number of thorns under them, and, struck with fear, he withdrew his hand, and went away without his object. the boy's younger brother by chance perceived at a distance what had past; and although he was very little, having a stout heart, he was not afraid of the prickles. he boldly plucked the flower, and along with it obtained also a very fine fruit, which soon made him forget the pain he suffered in procuring it. when a person is deterred from possessing a rose by the appearance of its thorns, his organs of smelling will never be regaled by its fragrance, nor will he derive the least advantage from any fruit, under similar circumstances.

the rose may represent the flowery persian; the fruit, an essential tongue like the hindoo-stance; and the thorns, such difficulties as must at first occur in the acquisition of either.

two boys young lads, one very society (in) science a learning began, one boy them of very good well-disposed was, the master, whatever lesson him to read gave, it remembrance made, and his book own house at, to read made a practice. the other inattentive very wicked was, who his comrade's labour at to laugh used, and always this observation his own school-fellow on to repeat used, " thou an ass art." he him to generally this answer to give used, friend! few days in to see behoves who may be. at last, trial's day having come arrived, them both to science's sea in to swim behaved, the wise boy—this fool—much behind ignorance's whirlpool in, shame through sinking—left, and to exclaim began. o friend! who your opinion in foolish sight coming are, the same they generality's presence wise turn out. and what such time you—have learned, it your use not coming of, without effect is. if own companion at, now we also jokes could crack, then our turn would be, according this saying to, that who wins may laugh, but wise men among, very remote is both friendship, and also reason from, such situation in, regret's stead ridicule to make, now I own remark—finished will make this advice and proverb with, that being one good of, late, better is, not being than, and the more speed be can, bad conduct having left, good towards to come, proper is.

two youths began to study together, one was a good prudent young man, who read his book at home and acquired whatever his master desired him; the other was an idle wicked boy, who always laughed at his companion's labour, and used to say to him, what a fool you are! on which his school-fellow commonly replied, we shall see by and bye who is the greatest. at last the day of trial came, when they were both obliged to swim in the ocean of science; the wise boy left the blockhead far behind him, sinking through shame in the whirlpool of ignorance. the promising scholar then exclaimed, my friend ! I think fools in your estimation will turn out wise men in other peoples' eyes, and that you have now learned this fact, when perhaps too late. were I inclined to laugh at the folly of a comrade, it would now be my turn, agreeably to the proverb, " he may laugh who wins ;" but it is inconsistent with both friendship and wisdom, to substitute ridicule for regret, on such occasions ; I shall therefore conclude with beseeching you to recollect, that " better late than never," and to turn over a new leaf as soon as possible.

were my young military readers aware of all the fatal consequences which may yet ensue from their ignorance or deficiency in the hindoo-stance, they would here anticipate that day of trial, which may otherwise terminate in the loss of honour, fortune, and life, and set seriously to work immediately ; since to attempt to direct and command men advantageously in the hour of peril, with whose language one is not well acquainted, is a task, which neither courage nor even presence of mind in other respects can always accomplish with any prospect of success.

two men together being set out, that a certain distant country in should go stay, a few days of space in, a country in having gone, arrived. one recollection made that, satisfaction and welfare with if here would dwell, then necessary is that first here of inhabitants of dialect, should learn, in short he—acquired (it), the other so proud was, that vulgar of language —contempt from not learned, only the court and literati's speech acquisition made. chance by, after some years—both same village in came, that where of tongue, and that country's one was, but there of residents—tumult having made strange country's magistrates—execution performed had. these two travellers separate places in market in were when those very murderers—them — seized and aside having taken each one of asking began, that your here what business is? who—dialect vulgar of, learned had, propriety with answer gave, him —they—safety (in) left, and the other traveller —who only the magistrates of tongue in reply gave, that crowd—inflamed anger with head his cut off.

two travellers set out together to live in a distant country; one of them found, that to remain there with safety, satisfaction, and pleasure, it was necessary first to learn the common language of the inhabitants, and he did so accordingly. the other was too proud to acquire the vulgar tongue, he therefore despised it, and studied the language of the court and learned alone. by chance a few years afterwards, they both met in a village, where the people had risen upon the foreign magistrates of the place, and destroyed them. in their way from this massacre, they observed our two travellers in different parts of the market, and interrogated them separately as to their business there. he who spoke the vulgar tongue, answered them so mildly and clearly, that they allowed him to depart safe and sound ; the other traveller, however, could only speak to them in the native language of the very magistrates who had been murdered, which enraged the populace to such a degree, that they cut off his head.

this is so possible and probable, that a resident in turkey will do well to learn the turkish speech before he dabbles in mere arabic lore, lest an insurgent rabble make him shorter by the head, for not keeping an intelligible tongue in it. a heedless youth may affect to treat this tragedy as a farce ; but he may yet find his self all in the wrong, when acting a comedy of errors on the stage of real life in british india, unless he now heeds the moral as he ought, and arms in good time against the risk of future mishaps, in propria persona.

a story is, that a boat in, two people scated were, one of them a logician was, the other a swimmer, the logician—swimmer of asked, say friend you—any science logic of even learned have or not, he said, that I—as yet logic's name even not have heard, acquiring of then mention what, having heard, regret began to make, that you, your half life ignorance's sea in have sunk. such (discourse) in, a storm appearing was, the swimmer—joking with logician to observed, say sir, any swimming even you to coming is or not, he replied at all not, then he—sorrow feeling cried, that you, your whole life (to) the winds have given.

it is related, that two people were on board the same vessel, one of them was a logician, the other an expert swimmer. the logician addressed the swimmer thus, “ pray tell me, my friend, if you have also acquired the science of logic or not?” he replied, I have not till this moment even heard of the name of logic, learning it therefore is out of the question entirely. when the enquirer heard this, he began to pity the other in these words: alas! you have sunk the half of your life in the ocean of ignorance. on this a storm arose, the swimmer jocosely thus questioned the logician. well, sir! does your worship understand any thing of the art of swimming or not? he answered, I really know nothing at all about it. then said the swimmer, heaving a profound sigh, you have indeed thrown away your whole life on the winds.

a profound orientalist in india, without hindoostanee, might often be as unfortunate as the logician, if he were to confide in his learning alone to carry him always over that extensive region, with profit, honour and safety, through either the ordinary or extraordinary occurrences of life.

a king—his minister and generalissimo to deliberately observed, treasure and army's collection making in, my judgment any use not performs, if riches collection may make, then troops not remain, if army shall keep, then wealth not continues. the premier—remark made sire! treasure collection should be made, if the military not will stay, then any loss not is, because when needful shall be, may deign to retain. if my advice's majesty to confidence not be then it's this proof is, that a vessel in, little honey pray cause be placed, instantly thousands (of) flies round it—having come collected will be. the instant honey's plate caused place (was) myriads (of) flies word saying its round came (and) clung, then he—said thus behold sire what servant—representation made had, it majesty—seen (hath). then generalissimo—stated, if my opinion you may hear, then forces should be retained that crisis in use may come, that period treasure even any good not will do, if your highness to faith not be, then my advice—trial make pray. a pan in honey night at this place cause put may, if flies it on shall alight, then my counsel is false, and if not, then true. his bidding on night at honey's bason which (was) set, then one fly even not came. moral it's this is, when one's army one's grasp from gone (hath) again day dark in, money even expenditure (one) may be pleased to make, still procurable such not will be.

a king in consultation with his minister and general, observed, that his judgment failed on the subject of both filling the treasury and preserving an army, because attention to the finances alone exposed him to lose his troops, which, when retained, made him poor indeed. the premier represented, that his majesty should condescend to amass wealth, for if the forces were disbanded, no inconvenience could accrue, when his highness should deign to recruit them—should your majesty, says he, not confide in my suggestion, put it to the proof, by ordering a honey-pot to be placed, so that thousands of flies may swarm upon it. no sooner was this ordered to be done, when thousands in the twinkling of an eye (or speaking the word) clung around it. upon this, he continued; behold! sire, you have just seen my prediction confirmed. the general, on this, most respectfully stated, if you will only hear me, I think the army should be preserved, that in time of need it may prove useful, for then, indeed, money even can do no good. should your majesty not confide in my counsel, pray put it to the test in this way; let a cup full of honey be set here at night, and if flies do alight upon it, then my opinion is false, not otherwise. agreeably to his desire, the vessel of honey was deposited at night, but not a single fly approached it; whence this inference may be drawn, that when the forces are once dispersed, should the dark day of calamity arrive,

ix. the eye, nose, ear, and tongue, one day began to quarrel among themselves, each affirming that it was more advantageous to mankind than the other. the eye observed, without me day and night would prove alike, for nothing but darkness would reign on the face of the earth. in short, every one said a great deal in his own behalf, when the tongue made this observation : what you mention my friends may be all very true, yet surely none of you can be ignorant of the fact, that as my powers alone distinguish man from brute, it therefore behoves that I be greater than you all in the estimation of the wise. yes, cried the ear, recollecting yourself, my forward scholar ! after the lessons which you have received from me, as your master.

the subsequent literal version of the above, will clearly point out where, and how far both languages coincide with or differ from each other. this is the practice I so strongly recommend to every scholar at first, who really desires to acquire through time, and from the natives themselves, a facility of blending the elegance and fidelity of translation as much as possible together, because I conceive it the one

ankh, nak, kan, uor zooban, ek roz luge jhu-gur-ne apus men, ek ek kuhta ki wooh tha ziyadu fa'idumund insan ko doosre se—ankh bolee, bina mere din o rat hote dono burabur. bare hur ek ne kuha buhoot koochh coske upne huqq men, jub zuban ne kiya yih kalam. jo toom kuhte ho yaro howe sub buhoot rast, pur ul-buttu toomhon men ko'ee nu ho suke na waqif is bat se, ki meree qoodrut ukelee jooda kur-tee insan huewan se, isliye chahiye ki muen hon uzeez toom sub se, beech khiyal uqlmundon ke. han kan pokara, ap sochke, mere honhar sha-gird! buud tuuleem ke jo toom ne soonee moojh se, toomhara costad hokur.

It will not prove a very easy task to produce a version more true to the original than the present, a reversion therefore would only waste time to no purpose. the very few places in which the two differ, must by this time strike every student's eye, who has not taken a premature, and consequently an unprofitable glance, at this portion of the work. I need hardly observe, that the more literal and faithful a translation is rendered in any language, there is the less chance of its being either elegant or even intelligible among the people, who are best qualified to judge of its merits, in both these points. when this english story was submitted in the above literal dress to the natives, it certainly did not require much explanation to make them fully comprehend the meaning and purport of the whole, which they, nevertheless, much more idiomatically and elegantly, expressed thus :

ankh, kan, nak, uor zuban, ek roz apus men jhugurne luge, hur ek inh men se kuh ruha tha ki muen admee ke waste sub se ziyadu moofed hoon. puhle ankh bolee ki moojh bughuer doonya men rat din burabur ruhta, siwa e tareekke ke, roo e zumeen pur koochh nu nuzur ata, ghuruz hur ek ne upne upne huqq men buhoot koochh bura ee kee. is men zuban ne yih bat kuhee, yaro jo toom kuhte ho so ho sukta hue, lekin jo muen kuhtee hoon, ose toom men se ko ee inkar nukur sukega, dekho sirf meree goya ee se insan uor huewan men intiyaz hotee hue, is liye chahiye ki muen aqilon ke nuzdeck sub se ziyadu uezeez ruhoon. kan phir soon kur bol otha, han shagirdi rusheed ! yih bat such hue, pur buud meree tuuleem ke.

the next exercise, which is a species of allegorical tale in the oriental manner, is left without an idiomatical english translation, as a task, or trial of skill, for the scholar, when farther advanced in his own and this language. the style is of course more elevated and flowery than any of the preceding, it will therefore serve as an excellent introduction to the higher and more difficult compositions, in prose and verse, of the hindoostanee tongue, which the student must never seriously attempt, until not only well grounded in the grammatical principles, but in the necessary stock of arabic and persian words for such an enterprize. in the poetical exercises, by making some allowance for the unavoidable transposition of words in a poem, the assiduous scholar will perceive nothing very formidable even in the learned or court dialect of the hindoostanee, because, if he knows the rudiments well, he can at once reduce these odes, or any other, into plain prose, which, through a literal version, must lose every appearance of intricacy and difficulty, that may at first have alarmed him. the paraphrases will, it is hoped, prove no bad specimens of the poetical productions of the east, in an english dress, if we mean to express rather what the poet would have written, as a european author, than what he has done as an orientalist.

two youths were, one's name perseverance
 ther associating country of ignorance left and palace of promotion's search in province of science's road took. very far not advanced had when hill of selection at arrived, it on from, own stage's end black miles at descried.
 then thence descended and forwards marching when observation made, then a cross road sight came, seeing on, perplexed became; both conception made that each way this very place from, exaltation's palace to leading is, because that there two posts were, one upon writing conspicuous in plain this written was, that this useful road is and other upon the same writing in, famous way yet this road though winding was still broad, clean, pleasant (was). many novices it upon going were and its both sides upon, the rose blooming its charms to give remain did, and great great trees umbrageous much spread the sun's fierce rays from them saving were. in short, them the nightingales warbling and damsels' melodious notes, the road long thus beguiling were, that toil journey's at all felt not was and way's every one turn at, individual individual cup-bearer comely well bred, nectar's cup hand in holding, jovial way-farers of entertainment for, sight coming was. the delight and pleasures tents that here and there like minarets standing were, travellers who them in seated or sleeping were, their service for one one fau-holder flies driving away for ready was, this on, the highways genii, pride to sign made and temptation gave, thus come us after after along, their bidding to according thoughtless went and perseverance to said, you us like do, hearing just, this youth him to said, well path of ease you to welcome be. in fine perseverance useful way reason and discrimination's spy-glass with well examine to began, lastly perception made, although this path rugged, stony up down is, nevertheless straight and short is, and this lad's sake for, him to also auspicious one circumstance happened, that sun of truth's rays' from, contempt and prejudice's lowering clouds, that long since overcasting were, the same that instant break to began and its light from here and there road on, how many fruits and clusters of the grapes of ordinary life and justice, which entangled trees on, leaves of covering under, hanging were, sight came, besides this, those trees' roots of rocks from, many a fountain honesty and self guidance of bubbling up saw, this all something reflection making, perseverance own very counsel on resolution assuming, useful road to preference gave. this matter truth is, that his ears melody and songs from any delight not obtained, and his eyes to there of splendour, variegated from, dazzling not came, but journey in viaticum comfortable, there of arriving till wanting not was, and place of promotion in entered having, when turning look gave, then own fellow traveller half way espied, and as fate would have it, he that time road having left, some garden flowery in a beautiful goldfinch after, without reflection to run continue did. at last this lad its appearance and beauty's attraction here to dance led and distracted made, that running running incapacity and neglect's abyss in fell and instantly the pit's mouth shut became. perseverance this calamity terroure exciting palace of promotion's height from seen having, own determination goodness and firmness at rejoiced was and praise made, then own mind in said, how good was that I useful road in opposition pride to, and bad advisers to contrary acted having, in time end of wishes to have arrived.

this will prove one more opportunity for the learner to display his prowess as an english composer, somewhat in the style of the celebrated vision of mirza, though the allusions here can forcibly strike those minds only, who seriously observed the preposterous policy in the college of fort william, of allowing the students, for some years after its first establishment, to study any oriental language they pleased. the consequence naturally was, that the idle and gay flocked to the persian class, and deserted all the rest. many expulsions became from time to time necessary, and terminated in an order, long in force, that every student should commence with the hindoo-stanee at least, without which, from its great difficulty in the pronounciation alone, it would have been almost entirely deserted.

whatever may be asserted on the brilliancy of fancy which sparkles through many literary works in the east, few men will dispute the palm in favour of the oriental writers, for that correct taste and sound judgment, which are so conspicuous on comparison in the classics of the west. among many other instances of bad taste, the most prominent in my estimation is the pedantic style which disfigures almost every prose production now extant in the hindoo-stanee language, and which renders it often wholly unintelligible to every reader, who is not as deep in arabic or persian lore, as the learned man who composed the book itself. if excellence in a popular tongue consisted in writing any thing far above the conception of the people for whom it is intended, every body must allow, that some of the hindoo-stanee authors and translators stand unrivalled in this species of composition. in fact, to say the least that can be observed on so absurd a perversion of talents and learning, most of the former efforts of this description, that I have yet seen, might be very good arabic or persian, for any thing I know to the contrary, were they not disjointed and disfigured by the occasional introduction of a hindoostanee postposition or verb, which, like the casual flash of lightning in a dreary night, served but to render the surrounding darkness still more visible. this false taste is no where more discernible and preposterous than in the prefaces of oriental works, which are in general composed in an affected idiom so much beyond the level of ordinary capacities and acquirements, that very few of the men, who can comprehend the body of the publication itself, are qualified to wade through the wonderful display of erudition which announces its birth. such a profound harbinger, one would imagine, is absolutely requisite in india, to stamp a proper value on any literary performance, of which, in the preliminary portion, at least, it may commonly be asserted with great truth, that it must be an incomparable book, because nobody can well understand the introduction to its contents. to expose and explode this monstrous abuse of a living colloquial language, by giving it a new and impartial bias, had been my constant study, for some years while on the spot, and I am not altogether without hopes of having established my success, on the broad basis of public utility to ourselves, as the rulers of british india, and to its inhabitants of every description also, as our subjects. if we are to indulge any prepossessions on the score of language or laws, I think sound policy and justice will point out the hindoos as the most proper objects, being still the great, ancient, and useful mass of the people in our east indian empire. at all events, it cannot be disputed, that our magistrates ought to be as well qualified to comprehend a hindoo's complaint, viva voce et propria persona, as to understand a moosulman of any rank or description whatever. in spite of the clamour which the admirers of the qcoran or the literature of persia, and their abettors at home or abroad, may raise against all my exertions of the present nature, I shall persevere in the great work of reform which I have so successfully begun. as nothing can facilitate this object more than easy, familiar, and accurate translations from one tongue to the other, the learner is here presented with the first fable in the polyglot collection, as a specimen of all the rest, which have lately been published in that plain, general, useful, middle style, which ought ever to take the lead in a popular speech, whose worth depends much less on its erudition, when contrasted with the languages of europe, than on its general prevalence and utility, when comparéd with any other oriental tongue, in the extensive regions of india. those moosulmans who, from local circumstances, and a habitual tendency to pedantry, know little of the wonderful pliancy and copiousness of the hindoostanee tongue, independent of its modern sources, will no doubt object to many hinduwee words that may be safely introduced into the broad, conciliating, unaffected style, which I have recommended. to them, from real experience, I can oppose a whole host of hindoos, with a potent band of those mooslims also, who in hindoostan maintain that intercourse with the bulk of the people, among whom they have resided for centuries, which is so favourable to the formation and existence of a grand popular language. when moosulmans treat of abstruse and scientific subjects, they must lean to arabic, as the hindoos cæteris paribus will do to the sunskrit; but in the ordinary concerns of life, and in the judicial, military, commercial, and revenue departments, such necessity and predilection are less frequent, except where local dialects or circumstances impose a preference, to the partial exclusion of some, or all the rest.

11. the israelities, ever murmuring and discontented under the reign of jehovah, were desirous of having a king like the rest of the nations. they offered the kingdom to gideon their deliverer, to him, and to his posterity after him : he generously refused their offer, and reminded them, that jehovah was their king. when gideon was dead, abimelech, his son by a concubine, slew all his other sons to the number of seventy, jotham alone escaping ; and by the assistance of the shechemites, made himself king. jotham, to represent to them their folly, and to shew them that the most deserving are generally the least ambitious, whereas the worthless grasp at power with eagerness, and exercise it with insolence and tyranny, spake to them in the following manner :

hearken unto me, ye men of shechem, so may god hearken unto you. the trees, grown weary of the state of freedom and equality in which god had placed them, met together to choose and to anoint a king over them : and they said to the olive-tree, reign thou over us. but the olive-tree said unto them, shall I quit my fatness wherewith god and man is honoured, to disquiet myself with the cares of government, and to rule over the trees ? and they said unto the fig-tree, come thou, and reign over us.

but the fig-tree said unto them, shall I bid adieu to my sweetness and my pleasant fruit, to take upon me the painful charge of royalty, and to be set over the trees? then said the trees unto the vine, come thou and reign over us. but the vine said also unto them, shall I leave my wine, which honoureth god and cheereth man, to bring upon myself nothing but trouble and anxiety, and to become king of the trees? we are happy in our present lot: seek some other to reign over you. then said all the trees unto the bramble, come thou and reign over us. and the bramble said unto them, I will be your king; come ye all under my shadow, and be safe; obey me, and I will grant you my protection. but if you obey me not, out of the bramble shall come forth a fire, which shall devour even the cedars of lebanon.

it being pretty generally conceived, that there is no such thing as a hindoostanee story without either arabic or persian, I now submit the following to the public. in it there is not one word of these languages ; still the hindoostanee here preserves its character and regimen so perfectly, that I am convinced the whole will be understood by all classes of men in india, who have yet learned what hindoostanee means.

a person was writing a letter to send somewhere, when another came and set down beside him, who began to look at the letter. he then inserted in the epistle, thus, " I had a number of circumstances to state, which have not been put down, because there is a very silly fellow sitting by me, on this account they are omitted." the other said, " why don't you write any secrets which you intended ; for my part I have not seen a syllable of your writing." on which the writer observed, " well, if you have not seen it, pray inform me how you know that I have written so and so ?" at this the other was so much abashed, that he fixed his eyes on the ground, and could not lift up his head, to look the writer in the face.

I would recommend the next story, of the man who heard badly, to the serious attention of all indolent dialogists, who will not often be in a better situation, with those they address, than the deaf man was in with his friend. in fact, to expect much good from mere dialogue knowledge, is nearly as preposterous as to wonder why a blind man does not recover his sight by placing a pair of spectacles on his nose.

a certain merchant had a friend who was hard of hearing; by chance the merchant fell ill. the deaf man went to enquire after him, and, while going along the road, he made up this discourse. then after salutation I will first ask this—"well, sir, how are you?" he will say "better;" and I shall rejoin, "very good." when I enquire as to the diet he uses, he will say "rice-pudding;" to which I shall answer, "may it do you much service." I shall afterwards put the question, "pray who is your physician?" he will of course tell me, "dr. such a one is," and I may safely add, "may god prosper his hands in the accomplishment of his work." at length having settled this plan he reached the house, and, after the usual compliments, he seated himself near the patient. "my friend," says he, "how are you?" the sick man replied, "do not you see that I am dying of a fever;" on hearing which he observed, "excellent! I hope god will keep you so." the poor patient was already peevish enough with his disease, but this made him much more so. the deaf man next asked "what is your diet, my friend?" and was answered, "fiddlesticks;" "may they do you much good," the other rejoined; on hearing this he became in fact doubly enraged. his visitor then enquired thus, "do you, my good fellow, say which of the faculty attends you?" boiling with indignation, he cried, his worship

the following stories, translated from the persian and the arabic, will serve as a useful exercise for beginners ; I have therefore given them without an english translation.

to vindicate the severity of my animadversions, in the preface on hadley, I shall here insert my hindoostanee translation of his famous story; but, in justice to me, no attempt will I hope be made to read it to a native, until my orthography has been acquired, by giving every letter of the story the very individual sound it possesses in my hindee-roman system the reader will also be pleased to recollect, that the english of this tale will be found in hadley's book, for the style of which no body can justly hold me responsible, though I certainly have made the hindoostanee agree with it as much as possible. as the subjunctive or conditional mood and its tenses to beginners are more formidable in appearance than reality, I would advise them to compare my mode of expressing these here with others, and to recollect the great use of the present participle or tense, without its auxiliary signs, on all occasions of this kind. few people will conceive this sentence, "had I then been in europe, I would not have allowed my brother to come to india," so very simple as it in fact is. suppose the reader tries his own skill in hindoostanee, before he looks at my version of it : jo muen cos wuqt wilyut men hota to upne bha,ee ko hindoostan men nu ane deta. an adept will at one glance tell why the conditional jo is used and cos inflected, the utility of the illative or consequential to, and the reasons for upne being preferred to mere, as well as the use and nature of the permissive compound ane deta. it is by such phrases as the above, that the natives can in a moment discover, whether the person speaking to them is well versed in their language or not. several instances of the same nature occur in the story as I have given it, which the reader may put to the test of experience whenever he pleases, as I have not the smallest idea of flinching from any ordeal that may be proposed on this subject.

if his wretched performance be still extant, or the scholar can hereafter try his own hand upon this story, as advised in the preceding pages, and on the plan exhibited in the ixth story.

while I shall consider it as a most laudable effort by any of my pupils to commence colloquial exertions on board ship, during the outward passage, the learner must recollect, that any thing of this sort will be very far beyond his strength in the language for two or three months, as a great deal of explanatory circumlocution must take place between the lushkurees (lascars) and himself, before the subject discussed can be deemed at all satisfactory and correct in such intercourse. both parties must be liable to innumerable misconceptions, which nothing but great skill in the hindoostanee grammar and pronunciation can avoid and rectify completely, a task that might be accomplished by an experienced linguist alone, who has sojourned one year at least in the east indies. all questions or observations, abruptly introduced to the natives of that region, puzzle them amazingly, though the same remarks, cautiously made and progressively unfolded to their view, often appear easy in the extreme, and lead to a mutual understanding immediately. so many materials have been collected in these sheets, to form a rational etymologist, that every acute mind will insensibly become one during his career in the hindoostanee alone, more especially as most words in that significant speech may be traced very satisfactorily to their origin or root in the sunskrit and other languages. this process will be quickly attained by considering the initial, medial, and final portions of words attentively, and at the same time adverting to the euphonic mutability of letters, in the various and ever-varying forms they assume in all languages. I am not very certain that the words disease in english, and chapeau in french, will strike every eye at the first glance as compounds of dis without, and ease; of chat a cat, and peau skin; but I may safely take it for granted, that my more intelligent readers will hardly dispute the point, when reminded, that we call a hat a beaver, on similar grounds. in such etymologies, supposing even that they are false, the bare exercise of the juvenile mind upon them is productive of much benefit, giving to words a sort of local habitation and a name in the memory, which otherwise they cannot possess, and consequently too often pass away without leaving a vestige behind. puhar signifies a hill, but when we analyze it as puh, the dawn, and ar; concealing, covering, into the dawn-hider, which, in a flat country, it might be called, there is very little chance of our ever forgetting the word puhar again, whether the deduction here be right or wrong. on similar principles puhulwan a champion, or the first man who comes out to brave the enemy to combat; even puhul, puhla first, may be deduced from puh, since the dawn of day would very naturally present itself to the mind of man, as a primary point of time to reckon from. I am aware that etymological inferences have been laughed to scorn, from the frequent abuse of this rational exercise of our mental powers, but where is the art or science that has escaped gross perversion and misuse any more more than etymology, which will, at no distant period, break through the gloom of prejudice and misconception, and, with the never-failing light of truth and reason, carry conviction to every thinking breast. the want of thought in most schools, is owing to the great stress which is very absurdly laid there upon memory only; the mind and judgment are consequently as little improved, after some years of memorial drudgery, as if they really required no care or cultivation whatever: the consequence naturally is, that few people retain, after five or six years, any more of their classical lore than barely enough to constitute them tolerable etymologists in their own tongue, though probably not a little defective in its grammar. were youths very early taught english grammar and arithmetic; were they often obliged to complete sentences, taken progressively from different authors, in which a few of the leading words were purposely omitted, they would much sooner reason and think seriously on their studies than people are aware of; and their real proficiency would, in general, so far surpass our most sanguine expectations, that I would stake every thing on the successful issue of an experiment founded on such grounds.

 one look is enough for the gay,— and more than enough for the brave.

 so graceful their motions appear ;
 each step is admir'd with a sigh,
 each sigh is condens'd to a tear,

though glancing they carelessly dart fell arrows of scorn from their eyes, those lodge in so mortal a part,
 our souls are their victims and prize.

 to spread their dark locks o'er thy car, the curtains of night will be thine, each face—a bright evening star.

in loving how can they be true, while honey distils from each tongue ;
 they spare not the old—nor the young

the bard whom those maidens address, in silence quaffs all that they say ;
 nay—wisdom is forc'd to confess,
 his wits have been ravish'd away.

lo ! wulee, the pride of our swains, hath lately forsaken his lyre—to gaze on the maids of the plains, whose gait fills his breast with desire.

sonnet by the late nuwwab asuf ood duolu

lubon pur dum hue mēra ṭhum ruhe ruhe nu ruhe.

the constant reiteration of ruhe in the hindoostanee verses has rather a monotonous appearance than effect, when pronounced with the impressive cadence and emphasis that are here required; but how shall I transfuse the elegance which the intervening negative nu diffuses over this portion of the original, in which similar expressions are no less beautiful than significant. ruhe ruhe nu ruhe, transcends my powers of communication in our own language, I shall therefore either cherish the hope that future trials will prove more fortunate, or rest contented in the interim, with comparing it to those passages, so well known in the unrivalled soliloquy, commencing with, the foregoing words literally considered will run thus, ruhe, if it stay : ruhe, it will stay ; nu ruhe, should it not remain ; nu ruhe, it will not remain. by phrases of this sort the uncertainty or contrast of events is inimitably denoted in the hindoostance, with a sweetness and precision similar to “ none but the brave, none but the brave, none but the brave deserve the fair.”

“ to be or not to be,” &c. which I fancy will fade in every version from our mother tongue.

before the sword divine, this little neck

I one day enquired of suoda the pilgrim—

empassioned at the question, abrupt he answered—“ hast thou one particle of reason, friend, or not ?

“ behold ! at the palace gate of the (late) monarch fureedon, a man calls aloud—is any one here or not ?”

what else, I oftimes pensive ween, can various creeds and tenets mean, whence flow the ardent pray'r, but that of mooslim, pagan, jew, must, as the christian's, each be true.

thus in one circle we divine, the radii from its bounding line concentric still unite ;
 so from the wide extended round of all religions, will be found one only lord of light.

with broken heart and wounded soul,
I wandering search from pole to pole,
for balm to heal my woes :
still not one doctor can I find,
like death, to cure my tortur'd mind.

sweet bird of eve, thy plaintive note could never drown my louder throat, if rev'rence due to love did not silence my moans and sighs, and bid me turn these streaming eyes

before whose dreadful sword, this neck is like the cobweb's finest wreck, that floats upon the air ;
look, angels ! tell me ay or nay, ye surely can the truth display,

that providence is just I own, though fortune sternly on me frown ;
 the fault perhaps is mine ;
 come, cherubs ! teach the soothing plan of calm content to wayward man,

once I the pilgrim suoda spied, and then in earnest to him cried, “ hast thou no fix’d retreat ?”
 enrag’d, responsive, thus he spoke,

“ with reason’s eye here take a glance—“ through time and space’s vast expanse, “ (nor blink it with a tear)
 “ who knocking there incessant roars,

the freedom of paraphrase has led me to introduce one stanza, viz. the 2d, which is not in the original, to compensate for the loss of another, by condensing its 7th and 8th here, into the latter only, as the reader will easily perceive on comparing both together.

 that an angel might blush to descry,

ghuzuli hafiz

the intimate connection between the hindoo-stanee and persian languages, renders every apology for the appearance of the following ode from hafiz unnecessary, because we can no more separate the grammar of these tongues entirely from each other, than we can totally disjoin the greek and latin rudiments.

the shade of this body obscures the radiance of my soul; welcome that hour, when I may tear the veil from its celestial countenance.

such a cage doth not become a warbler like

I know not where I now am, nor where I formerly was ; woe is me, I have neglected my own self !

how can I wing my flight round the temple of the pure empyrean, while confined within the bars of this terrestrial frame ?

why should I, who aspire to the asylum and abode of cherubs, find a mansion here among the haunts of degraded forms ?

should my heart's blood be stained with the dark hue of musk, be not surprised, for I am a fellow-sufferer with the musk-deer of khotun.

do not contemplate the gay form of my orient robes alone, while I like a taper am consuming with the internal fires, which this breast of mine conceals.

come, my soul ! draw the curtain of delusion from the eyes of hafiz, for while thou art, no body shall learn from him that he can really exist without thee.

the next hindoostanee ode is but a very humble imitation of the original, just translated, though not altogether destitute of merit, as the version of an excellent persian poem, which breathes the dulcet notes of a nightingale, pitched far beyond the sweetest strains of the imitative bulfinch, or the lowly bard of hindoostan.

hail, heavenly spark ! that gloriqus day, when thou, releas'd from circling clay, may soar to realms of bliss :

no longer shall this frame i
pure bird of paradise !

god's mystic scheme I vainly scan,
and grasp his mind infus'd in man ;
these—far transcend my song.
thro' death's deep gloom, how wing my flight, to that eternal source of light—

eccentric spirit ! why first roam—

 where kindred angels dwell ?
 how like the bounding musky deer, thou still art doom'd to anguish here—

those radiant orbs, earth's vernal bloom, lose all their charms, while I consume with melting sighs on sighs :
 yes, bright intelligence ! I see, my self cannot ascend to thee, till mortal hāfiz dies..

the animated allusion to the musk-deer by hāfiz, in these verses, can be relished by those only who will examine the natural history of this animal. if we add to this, the coagulated contents and general structure of the musk-bag, evident upon dissection, we shall find they are not very dissimilar to a heart, supposed to have its blood curdled and scorched by the ardour and anguish of disappointed love.

the reader will perceive my notions of self, both in metaphysics and philology, in this extract, from the celebrated persian grammar, which in this respect I implicitly follow.

“ I here use his self, and their selves instead of the corrupted words himself and themselves ; in which usage I am justified by the authority of sidney, and of other writers in the golden age of our language ; self seems to have been originally a noun, and was, perhaps, a synonymous word for soul, according to locke's definition of it : ' self is that conscious thinking thing, which is sensible or conscious of pleasure and pain, capable of happiness and misery.' if this observation be just, the arabs have exactly the same idiom : for their nufs, soul, answers precisely to our self, as subiycon ruma nufsuhoos fee nuhrin, a boy threw his self into a river."

since reason instead of custom should be the arbiter of language, it is high time to discard himself and themselves, as barbarisms, for ever, being in fact not less absurd, though more familiar to the ear than meself, theeself, usselves, yourselves, if introduced for myself, thyself, ourselves, yourselves, examples that incontestibly demonstrate the abuse here complained of, and the rational use of his self, their selves only, which I wish to inculcate. when we advert to elf and the social power of k, c, s, s-elf will not appear so very distant from soul ; which after all may be only a modified transposition of s, o, (w, v, f), l, to self, but on this curious metaphysical theme see page 52.

where are thy kind innocent expressions now, that having captivated my heart, thou talkest to me thus?—all thy words are gibes, and

not a moment without sarcasm, and each breath has become a taunting joke.

admiration hath not yet allowed the mirror to sleep, that opened its eyes on thy countenance.

the capsule of the flower doth not burst with such charms, as when the garments of the fair give way.

who hath been walking in the garden, that now the zephyrs come overloADED with the perfumes of blandishment?

come quickly, my beloved, for without thee
the clouds are not discharging hail, but bullets.

why shouldst thou dye the tips of thy fingers with hina (the ligustrum indicum, or eastern privet, called also menhdee, and much used for staining the nails, hands, and feet, of a red colour), while they can be dipped in the blood of victims (to thy love)?

ice, and are rivalled in affection by the maids of kabool.

with suoda, till the comb, interposing, unravelled their (prejudices) contortions.

with the view of insidiously stealing this heart?
ah! whence these harsh words I now hear?

why thus constantly poison whate'er you express,
with scoffs, gibes, and taunting unkind?

can satirical wit on a lover's distress become a benevolent mind ?

all the night for my fairest I ravingly pray, whole days can do nothing but weep.

when such innocence, beauty, and goodness, are each shaft but thy own from my heart.

with pencil and colours divine, shall paint sacrilegiously beauties deface, each bloom sees with envy in thine ?

 what comb hath the power to release thee again,

the fourth stanza alludes to the ardent passion with which the (boolbool) nightingale is supposed in oriental poetry to be inspired by its favourite flower (gool) the rose: such a sentiment, if founded in fact, goes far to prove that the persian boolbool, and our philomel are very different birds in their habits, nature, and song, however superior they still may be, to our bool finch, so called from its head's resemblance to a bull's; an etymology much more evident than the reduplication bool bool, as this rather seems to indicate its warbling powers, instead of its extraordinary attachment to boo, fragrance, perfume, whence its name may yet be traced by the acute goolcheens of the present or future times.

by way of conferring variety on these exercises, I shall now present the student with a wild plaintive ode from 'yuqeen, and another from 'tjoodrut, which have always been admired as the most happy of those celebrated poets' effusions.

what doth it avail, if while she is kind to another, the same deception as before is still continued to me one day I went to visit the mansions of the dead, where the tombs of slighted lovers abound ; there I beheld a daffodil pensive on a grave, and I thus addressed it :
well, why art thou dejected ? to this it returned : O friend, do not thou mistake me for a narcissus, I am the eyes of his self who owns this shrine ! I then said, but why do they seem longing, like mine ? whose arrival dost thou expect ? this mortal was the admirer of a relentless maid (replied the flower), and he still waits in fond expectation for her. thence it appeared evident to me, that, alas ! a lover's soul is distracted even after his decease.

words for a hindoostanee colloquist will, with the aid of the previous sections of this work, enable every assiduous student in the course of a few months, either in this country or during the outward voyage, to become such a proficient in that language as to be qualified, on his safe arrival at the place of destination, to converse on most ordinary topics with the natives, especially on such domestic and other daily occurrences, as are absolutely indispensable to new comers, at the several presidencies of british india. till that auspicious period, a knowledge of the oriental characters, or the use of a hindoostanee and english dictionary may be advantageously postponed, by those who cannot devote more than six months to the subject at home, an english and hindoostanee lexicon or vocabulary will therefore prove the one thing most needful in that way, connected with a due knowledge of grammar and pronunciation, obtainable through the medium of the hindie roman orthoepigraphical alphabet alone, in the comparatively short period of one half year at farthest. all the words inserted here occur, generally speaking, in the order of their actual utility, and frequency of use in the popular speech of hindoostan, without any particular regard to the persian, arabic, or aboriginal sources whence they severally spring. some might have been omitted I allow without detriment to the collection, but when these do appear they will commonly be found at the end of lines, which would otherwise have exhibited mere blanks, whence they may yet be drawn as valuable prizes in the learned languages, even from the casual glance bestowed upon them en passant by the colloquial tyro, in his future progress to still higher accomplishments and oriental pursuits, than those of a bare hindoostanee linguist, which will nevertheless afford the most

as there are a number of synonymous words in our own and every language, the student must remedy any occasional disappointment, when looking for a particular word, by a reference to another, probably more useful or common : thus, abandon, leave, desert, forsake, quit, neglect ; residence, abode, dwelling, house, home, lodging, place ; appearance, face, looks, figure, form—are words, all more or less, connected in their several series, and as the whole of them are not likely to be omitted in the vocabulary, a judicious reference, therefore, to one or other will in general supply the words wanted by the scholar. it will moreover sometimes happen, that any example whatever may prove puzzling enough, till its other meanings, all more or less obvious, be adverted to, and consulted accordingly. a writer may give innumerable instances similar to the above, but, unless his readers have adequate reflection and sagacity to improve upon them, both his precepts and examples must become labour in vain. many hindoo stance verbs being formed from the adjective or noun, and vice versa, it will be advantageous, in general, to refer from one to the other, as in fear, frighten, afraid, more especially when disappointment is to be avoided with a little ingenious exertion by the learner in this way, wherein he will be greatly assisted by consulting principles 115, to 122, 123, 124, especially these last, in pages 145. &c. on the composition of a vast number of the most requisite verbs in the language, the circumstance alone of the whole verbs appearing in future thus disjoined from their post-position na to, dur-na fear to, must point out an inexhaustible mine of nouns and imperatives sing, and pl. too dur fear-thou, toom dur-o fear-you.

references may occasionally be made from one word to another, where the connection, or contrast may not be very striking at first sight, till a few intellectual efforts be made on the scholar's part to discover and appreciate the author's referential drift in peculiar cases of this nature. under many vocables such a derivative concatenation has been adopted, that bare inspection will revive some of the principles inculcated throughout this work, on the score of radical and ramified formations, especially as they are then contrasted with similar processes in our mother tongue. every diligent scholar has it in his own power to render the vocabulary much more complete, by inserting in their proper places a vast number of excellent words which are scattered all over the work, besides those collected in pages 109, 110, 132, 134, 136, &c.

ERRATA.

In general it may be observed, that the very few trifling deviations from u, œ, n, e, r, d, t, t, h, h, kh, respectively to n, u, oo, n, c, r, d, t, h, kh, and similar slips of the press vice versâ (oversights in punctuation of course included), are such slight typographical errors, as hardly to demand individual correction in this place, since this may almost be performed currente calamo by the attentive reader, at the first glance.

The whole of these minute mistakes may safely be left to the learner's own judgment entirely, during his progress to rapid proficiency in the language, which, at every successive perusal of these sheets, will enable him to do the needful for his self, in this respect, without any other index than the compass of his own intellects, aided by those rules of reason and the simple art of thinking, which will infallibly point out the right reading from the wrong, in all the literal blemishes like the foregoing, that pervade the present or any other of my works. Every scholar should commence his study of them by correcting from the errata all visible faults of this description, and at the same time he may read the six pages on my new elliptical mode of instruction from 157, with great advantage to his future literary pursuits in general, and the hindoo stances in particular, after becoming fairly master of the preface by two or three cogitative readings, as the most essential prelude to conscious improvement at every subsequent step.

The annexed is a list of the most useful hindoostanee publications, in regular succession, according to their utility, to be procured at the hon. company's booksellers, no. 7, leadenhall street.

1. The hindoostanee story-teller and orthoepigraphical ultimatum, which is intended to convey an accurate idea of the orthography and ortheopy of the popular language of british india, in the roman, persi-arabic, and naguree characters; comprising a full account of those alphabets, in their application to the hindoostanee, which of course paves the way for future proficiency in persian, arabic, sunskrit, and all the provincial dialects of the peninsula. accurate pronunciation being the soul of colloquial intercourse in all living languages, this initiatory volume is a sine qua non for every oriental student, who means to sojourn, in any capacity, with profit and pleasure, among the natives of hindoostanee.

2. the present work, which has been confidently termed "the stranger's infallible east-indian guide," after thirty years experience of its real efficacy, as a compendium of hindoostanee grammar, may be studied with great advantage, along with the preceding introductory work to this portion of the subject. these two, and the next, may, in fact, be deemed the three indispensable text books for every student at the hindoostanee class, who may be anxious to acquire, in the shortest possible period, some proficiency as a practical colloquist, before his arrival at any of the british indian presidencies, and that general knowledge of eastern tongues, on sound principles, which will prove a solid foundation for every subsequent local and literary pursuit.

3. dialogues, english and hindoostanee, on domestic, military, medical, and miscellaneous themes, which, in addition to the exercises of the former publications, will demonstrate, in ordinary practice, the truth of the grammatical principles, or theoretical contents, laid down in numbers 1 and 2.

4. a complete grammar prefixed to the english and hindoostanee dictionary, of the utmost consequence for consultation at home, or on board ship, in confirmation of the lectures and the rudiments of the hindoostanee, comprized in 2, being on a larger scale in 4 than could have been introduced in so small a production as number 2.

5. british indian monitor, consisting of copious vocabularies in hindoostanee and english, or vice versa. these are undoubtedly necessary for translations from the story-teller,
